Cloture Sought to End Anti-Lynch Filibuster; Move Expected to Fail

Observers See Defeat of Plan to Halt Debate on Bill.

Gallery Is Rebuked For Demonstration

G.O.P. Expected to Join With Southerners in Killing Measure.

By Robert C. Albright.

Failing in two successive night session efforts to break through an unrelenting Southern filibuster against the anti-lynching bill, sponsors of the measure last night resorted to a last apparently futile weapon—"cloture."

Seventeen Senators, with leadership acquiescence, signed a petition to close off debate that otherwise promised to continue indefinitely. The petition was fully signed up and filed before the Senate recessed at 10:20 p. m., after 10 hours and 20 minutes of continuous session.

Privately, many of the signers admitted this move also would end in sharp failure, but declared they wanted a "showdown." It requires a two-thirds vote of the Senate to close off debate. Private polls indicated only from 25 to 30 Senators would vote for cloture.

Neely Circulates Petition.

The petition was circulated by Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, with support of the co-authors of the bill—Senators Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana (Democrats). It must lie on the desk a full calendar day, and would be in line for a vote at 1 p. m. tomorrow.

Neely sent the petition to the desk at 10:15 p. m. after Senator Richard B. Russell, jr. (Democrat), of Georgia, concluded a night-long speech in which he assailed the anti-lynching bill as an "aid to communism."

Briefly, Majority Leader Barkley summed up the parliamentary situation, and explained a cloture vote under the rules will be in order tomorrow. Minority Leader Charles L. McNary said he will oppose cloture.

G. O. P. to Fight Plan.

Later McNary, a supporter of the anti-lynching bill, told reporters virtually the entire Republican membership of 16 will vote against shutting off debate.

"This is the last body in the world permitting full and free debate," he said, "and a vote for cloture would be a vote against minority rights in the Senate."

If the cloture move fails, and it is freely predicted it will fail, early termination of the filibuster may develop through a move to lay aside anti-lynching legislation for other pending questions.

Throughout the day and into the night, Southern Senators had kept up a ringing tirade against the legislation, terminating in a brisk parliamentary clash over rulings of the chair.

Hill Attacks Bill.

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who on Monday had hung up a continuous speaking record for the session by talking for 5 hours and 55 minutes straight, had added another four and a half hours speaking time. Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, who only recently claimed his Senate seat, followed with a brief attack on the measure.

Senator Russell picked up where Hill left off, and continued until the cloture petition was filed by Senator Neely.

The following Senators signed the cloture petition:

Neely, West Virginia; La Follette, Wisconsin; Minton, Indiana; Van Nuys, Indiana; Wagner, New York;

Compulsion Is Needed to Bring Them Into Line, He Charges.

By Sidney Olson.

Drawing expressions of amazement from the House Judiciary Committee, Assitant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson yesterday contended the Department of Justice, in fighting monopoly through antitrust suits, "absolutely never can get results from the big companies without the use of compulsion."

By results he indicated he meant consent decrees, and compulsion he described as the use of grand juries sitting in criminal proceedings.

Reacting sharply, Committee Chairman Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), Texas, said:

Bruno Mussolini Spans Ocean and Lands in Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 25 (AP).—Two Italian transatlantic planes, one piloted by Premier Mussolini's son, Bruno, landed here today after a nonstop flight from Dakar, French West Africa.

The planes reached Rio de Janeiro at 6:59 p. m. (4:59 p. m. Eastern standard time), completing the 3,200-mile flight across the Atlantic and down the Brazilian coast from Natal, where a third Italian plane landed.

Twelve Brazilian army planes escorted the Italian fliers on the last stretch. A large crowd at the airport greeted them.

Report Urges Closing Girls' Prison School

House Group Seeks Savings by Transfer of Delinquents.

By James D. Secrest.

Abolition of the troublesome National Training School for Girls and the Children's Receiving Home will be recommended by the Collins sub-committee on District appropriations today, it is understood, when the District supply bill is reported to the House.

The District budget for the next fiscal year, it is learned, has been cut close to $1,500,000 below the Budget Bureau estimates and even below the current appropriations act.

This means that the total to be recommended by the sub-committee will be approximately $45,850,000.

The closing of the National Training School for Girls, the proposal for which was disclosed in The Post last November, will save the District thousands of dollars annually and probably will eliminate a source of frequent outbreaks that have sent police and firemen to the scene.

The girl inmates will be transferred to the District Reformatory

Store Clerks Over 40 Happier, Unrest Study of 7,500 Shows

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Employes over 40 were found happier on their jobs than those under 40 in a study "on the causes of labor unrest" made public today by Charles C. Stech, research and labor relations specialist.

In one respect only, of 15 questions asked, were the young and old equally satisfied and that was the extent to which their job security was based on merit.

The studies were made on 7,500 department store employes of all classes in six States—California, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York and Massachusetts. More than one-third of the persons questioned were 40 or over.

Conditions which the older employes found more satisfactory than the younger, given with the percentage of increased satisfaction, are:

Recognition for phases of good work which are easy to overlook—20 per cent.

General wage fairness—15.

Physical working conditions—12.

Wages compared with other companies—12.

All U.S. Arms To be Built up By Roosevelt

Air Force, Army Will Share Increases With Navy.

Program to Be Revealed Within 2 Days, House Leaders Told.

A broad increase in authorizations for national defense, strengthening Navy, Army and aviation arms against international contingencies, will be recommended to Congress by the President Thursday or Friday of this week.

The President outlined his proposals at a two-hour White House conference with House Appropriations Committee leaders who were bound to secrecy on details of the program to carry defense measures above former treaty limitations.

The preparedness position the President is expected to take in his message was indicated in a letter to the Thirteenth Women's Conference on National Defense, in which he disavowed "imperial designs" and made clear that his defense policy is "directed solely to the perpetuation of our democratic institutions and ideals and the guarantee of our national boundaries."

Mr. Roosevelt discussed at his conference at length reports concerning the armed preparations of nations abroad. He is understood to have made clear that this country has no present thought of sending armed forces abroad.

20 Per Cent Navy Increase.

But he pointed out that, in view of general world conditions and the action of certain foreign powers, this Government cannot afford to allow national defense preparations to lag. He said he has been conferring with Army and Navy officials on the extent of preparedness necessary to adequate defense and his recommendations will embrace the resulting conclusions.

It was regarded as significant that Secretary of State Cordell Hull meanwhile made several calls in the Senate and conferred briefly with Majority Leader Barkley and Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, on "international affairs." A former Senator, he appeared for a short time on the Senate floor.

The Presidential message, not as yet drafted, is expected to recommend a general expansion in every category of the fleet by 20 per cent above expiring treaty limitations, plus provision for auxiliary vessels not covered by treaty agreement.

Army to Get Munitions.

Smaller authorizations are expected for upbuilding the Army, mostly confined to material and munitions such as anti-aircraft guns, searchlights, fire control equipment and additional motorization of mobile land forces. Provisions may be added for increased officer strength.

A plan recommended by Secretary of War Woodring to build up Army's "enlisted reserve" strength also may be included in the message. This would provide for ultimate enrollment of 280,000 trained Army men in the "enlisted reserve" subject to call, compared with the present 3,000.

Proportionate increases are predicted for both Army and Navy aircraft. The Navy's pres-

BULLETIN.

New York, Wednesday, Jan. 26. (U.P.).—Mackay Radio early today reported a distress call from the British freighter Pancarrow in the Atlantic about 60 miles off Halifax, Nov Scotia. The Pencarrow reported her propellor was damaged and she was drifting "in ballast" in a southeast gale.

Strange and violent assortments of weather hit the United States and other countries yesterday as the entire world was swept by a storm of electrical currents caused by explosive spots on the sun, with the following results:

A wind and rain storm of terrific force struck the Eastern Coast crippled three ships and crushing buildings in nearby Maryland.

The "worst blizzard in its history" howled over Michigan, piling snow in drifts 20 feet high, blocking highways completely and marooning hundreds in stalled automobiles.

In Arkansas overflowing streams and rivers inundated the countryside.

Cold Wave Strikes South.

A cold wave, preceded by snow flurries as far south as Macon, Ga., rode into Dixie.

The Aurora Borealis, rarely seen in southern or western Europe, was seen all over England, causing the Windsor fire department to be called out in belief Windsor Castle was on fire, and caused villagers in Portugal to rush from their homes fearing the end of the world.

Hail and torrential rain accompanied strong winds in most of Maryland as a series of cold northwest winds swept out a period of mild temperatures.

A number of farmhouses and barns in Cavetown and Chewsville, near Hagerstown, were unroofed by the gale while winds piled up the tide in the Wicomico River 18 inches, flooding streets in Salisbury. A construction tower in Baltimore was reported toppled by the wind.

Twenty-foot snowdrifts were reported blocking highways in Michigan and isolating hundreds of families in farmhouses where fuel and

James Regrets in Back of Bars As 17 Cases Dwindle to a Pint

This is the story of how James Lemon proved to himself by a sort of alcoholic mathematics that crime doesn't pay. James watched 17 cases of liquor dwindle to a pint.

According to the police, James, who is 34 and colored, drove off in a truck belonging to the International Distributing Corporation, containing the whisky when it was parked in the 600 block Fourth street southwest.

He drove, the police said, to Wiley Court northeast, where he gave a friend three cases to pay for watching the truck while he drove back for his own car to haul away the remaining 14. Back in Wiley Court, James polished off a pint, loaded up his car and departed. On the way a stanchion supporting the H street northeast bridge blocked his progress.

After appealing for aid to several motorists, James found a helpful truck driver, who took him and the 14 cases to Pierce street northwest. There James gave seven cases to Wesley Mangum, colored, 48, to watch over the remainder while he went for a cab.

James came back with the taxicab, loaded in his seven cases and was driven to his home in the 200 block of C street southwest. While he was fumbling with the lock, the cab driver vanished with the seven cases.

Back on Pierce street, meanwhile, Wesley Mangus had ben sampling his seven cases. Before long he was in no condition to notice that someone had made off with five cases.

Scout Car Patrolmen A. B. Nicholson and M. O. Myers went to the scene of James' crash and found in the wrecked car a social secuurity card which solved the case.

Lewis Predicts U. S. 'Debacle' If Wages and Prices Are Cut

1,900 Miners in National Convention Cheer Threat Workers Will Resist Efforts to Make Them Bear Brunt of Recession.

Government and industry were warned to maintain wage scales by John L. Lewis, as he addressed more than 1,900 whistling, cheering delegates to the biennial United Mine Workers national convention in session here yesterday.

A complete "economic, social and political debacle" was predicted by Lewis if wages and prices are allowed to collapse. The meeting, one of the largest of its kind ever held here, took place at the Rialto Theater.

"One school of economists," said Lewis, "wants production costs cut to stimulate production.

"The answer to that," he thundered, "is that is has not worked and that it never will."

"We tried that under Hoover," cried the C. I. O. chief.

The miners rocked the theater with boos.

"No one need tell the miners whose wages were cut from 1925 to 1932, that," he said. "The miners know that those cuts didn't result in the consuming of another trainload of coal."

Lewis advocated, as the first medicine for economic ills, immediate Federal appropriation of $6,000,000,000. Of this sum, he said, $5,000,000,000 should go for a gigantic low-cost housing program. The other billion would go for relief needs, he said.

For relief next winter, another $2,000,000,000 will be needed, Lewis declared. He suggested that Congress tap the social security reserve fund for housing.

The C. I. O. leader maintained that the Federal Government should refuse to buy anything from employers cited for violation of the labor act and should forbid the National Guard from being used as police in labor disputes.

Congress, he maintained, should tax fuel oil as a luxury, broaden the scope of the social security program and increase the benefits, and

Lorton's Felons Loosed on City, LaRoe Asserts

Convicts Freed Daily Without Supervision, He Declares.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington is at the mercy of hardened criminals, gunmen and racketeers who are released daily from the Lorton Reformatory without adequate supervision or restrictions, said Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the District Parole Board, speaking at the fourth open forum session of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

The dangerous criminals—those to be feared by law-abiding citizens of Washington—are not ones who have been released on parole, he declared. Rather, LaRoe warned, they are prisoners who have been refused parole and are eventually released "without strings" at the expiration of their sentences. Approximately 60 per cent of Lorton inmates are refused parole, he added.

"You people," the parole official told his listeners, "had better stop worrying about the prisoners we parole and start worrying about the hordes of those who come out of prison on their own—without homes or employment."

The District's parole system, said LaRoe, is not working perfectly. Handicaps include an inadequate staff, lack of money and cramped facilities for properly supervising paroled prisoners.

Gambling, LaRoe continued, is the most serious of all local crimes. Many so-called "big-shot" racketeers still are at large and operating in the District, he charged.

Flaying the "numbers" racket as a "disgrace to the District," LaRoe scored Congressional leaders for

Order Is Considered to Make Ship Searches for Arms Legal.

By the United Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 25.—A declaration of war against China was threatened by the Japanese government tonight as a means of bringing "third powers" under the international rules governing a blockade, which permit search and seizure of neutral vessels carrying arms.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, responding to questions from the floor of the Diet, charged arms shipments were filtering into China through the British port of Hongkong and other channels and said a declaration of war was "possible" if other powers continue to supply China with war materials.

Great Britain was the target of a sharp attack on the floor of the Diet by Baron Takehiko Sonoda, who remarked:

"If Britain insults Oriental races and fails to respect Japan's position in the Far East, Japan would be unable to guarantee the existence of Britain's rights and interests in China."

Hirota said the government had information concerning shipments of arms through the British crown colony of Hongkong, but added these were "only a small part" of the total British shipments.

Baron Sonoda paid tribute to the United States "attitude" concerning the Far Eastern situation. He also remarked that Britain's decision to suspend the plan for sending its fleet to the Far East was "timely."

"Britain should refrain from unnecessarily arousing the Japanese people," he declared.

Winship Orders Dock Strike Peace

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Gov. Blanton Winship tonight issued a virtual ultimatum to steamstip companies and striking dock workers to reach an agreement within 48 hours or else the government would take control of the waterfront.

Companies Profiting in Good Times Urged to Bear Losses.

Warns Wage Cuts Mean U. S. Outlays

President Talks With Earle of Troubles in Coal Industry.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt yesterday called on American industry to maintain wage levels, and at the same time urged mass production industries to reduce their prices to "what the people can afford to pay."

Price reductions, he declared, should not come out of wages. He contended that those who believed in the profit system "must recognize that those who get the profits when business is good must bear the losses when business temporarily is slack."

"Those who get the profits when industry gets the volume," he asserted, "are the ones to bear the risk of such price reductions as may be necessary to stimulate and restore volume."

He further maintained that for industry to pursue either a policy of keeping up prices at the expense of purchasing power and employment or cutting wages and thereby reducing purchasing power "is self-defeating and suicidal."

Warns Against Wage Cuts.

The President concluded his formal remarks with a thinly-veiled warning that if industry reduced wages this winter and spring, the Government would be forced to undertake huge pump-priming expenditures. He asserted such action by industry would make it necessary for the Government "to consider other means of creating purchasing power."

Mr. Roosevelt made these declarations in a formal statement he read to his semiweekly press conference in a deviation from the usual conference practice. Basing his statement on a question, propounded several days ago to one of the White House secretaries by a correspondent, the President permitted quotation of his answer. Ordinarily, the President orally answers only those questions propounded to him at his press conference, and his answers, while they may be attributed to him, may not be quoted directly.

So important did Mr. Roosevelt apparently believe it was to record himself formally and emphatically against wage reductions that he swept aside the customary procedure of his press conference.

Business Conference Set.

At the same press conference, the President revealed that a conference of approximately 500 small businessmen would be held next week, probably Monday, with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper and Assistant Secretary of Commerce Ernest G. Draper. Mr. Roosevelt said that a number of small businessmen had requested a conference with him, but that it was physically impossible for him to consult with such a large group.

He said that after the large group talked things over with the two Commerce Department chieftains, he hoped a committee of 12 of the businessmen would be named to confer with him.

The President conferred with Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania and several of his associates regarding the anthracite industry. At his press conference the President declined to discuss details of this conference, but intimated consideration was being given to some type of State intervention into the anthracite industry—possibly public operation.

Mr. Roosevelt also conferred with O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina and counsel for

Keep States Out Of TVA, Warns Sen. McKellar

Protests Joint Move to Spur Commonwealth, Municipal Buying.

By the United Press

A Tennessee Valley Authority move, which might result in State and municipal purchases of public utilities, yesterday brought vigorous protests to President Roosevelt from Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee.

McKellar hurried to the White House after the three-man TVA directorate had authorized David E. Lilienthal, one of its group, to negotiate with private utilities for possible sale of their properties to municipalities, mutual associations, rural associations, other public agencies and the TVA.

The move came ten days after Wendell Willkie, head of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, urged the Government, in a newspaper statement, to purchase the corporation's properties in the Tennessee Valley to meet a "desperate" situation. After this, a three-judge Federal court in Chattanooga upheld the President's "yardstick" power rate program, and Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee urged the Chief Executive to accept Willkie's offer.

Joint Purchase Proposed.

Browning proposed that the Government and Tennessee jointly purchase the physical properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co., a Commonwealth subsidiary, and that a State-controlled commission administer operation. The Tennessee Governor said the President described his plan over the telephone as "splendid." Browning is to confer with Mr. Roosevelt, the TVA directors and New Deal Power advisers here Thursday.

McKellar, sharply opposed to Browning's plan and accusing his Governor of having been friendly to the utilities when he was serving in the House of Representatives, told newspapermen on leaving the White House that he "protested vigorously" to Mr. Roosevelt. He reported the President to be "not familiar" with the Browning plan details.

"As I look at it, it is a power company proposal coming after they have been defeated by the courts," McKellar said.

He said TVA, "which is doing such a splendid job," should purchase the private utilities up for sale, and the Government should not share administrative responsibility with the States.

Democratic Feud Echoes.

Echoes of a Democratic feud in Tennessee entered the dispute when McKellar charged Browning's plan was supported by Senator George Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, millionaire labor leader, whom Browning named to fill the unexpired term of Senator Nathan Bachman. McKellar will be up for re-election in 1942, and Browning is reported to have ambitions for a Senate post.

McKellar was responsible for reinstating in the independent offices appropriation bill an appropriation to begin construction of the Gilbertsville (Ky.) dam, which was stricken out by the House.

In the House, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, charged private power companies repeatedly had "double-crossed" TVA while "talking compromise and settlement." He defended TVA but demanded that the "yowling, yelling cat-and-dog act" of its three directors be stopped by Congress.

He referred to internal dissension among the directors which—among other things—Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, "Father of TVA," asked in a resolution be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission.

"The TVA is run by three directors—a sort of a Roman triumvirate," Maverick said. "Theoretically, the work is divided and they should get along with each other. But they fight and yell at each other in public."

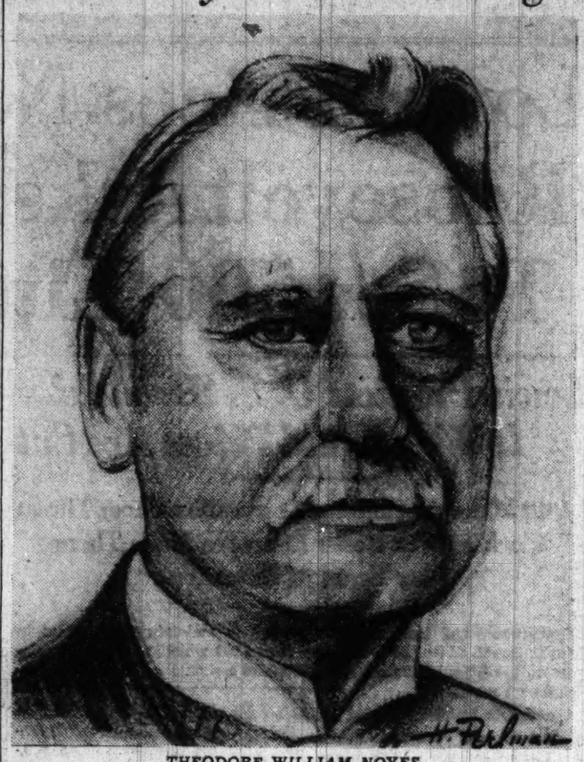
Working for Washington

D. C. Civic Leaders to Honor T. W. Noyes at Dinner Tonight



THEODORE WILLIAM NOYES.

1,000 to Gather in Tribute to Pioneer Fighter for Public Improvements and Beautification of the National Capital.

By Christine Sadler.

At the Willard Hotel tonight 1,000 Washingtonians will attend a birthday dinner given in honor of Theodore Williams Noyes, veteran civic leader who has devoted a lifetime of 80 years to work for the District of Columbia and its inhabitants.

Although sponsored by friends in the Board of Trade and other civic organizations, all civic and business groups in the city will participate in the ceremonies—for few indeed are the organized Washington groups not indebted to Mr. Noyes for leadership and assistance.

At their last meeting, members of the Federation of Citizens Association termed him the "outstanding Washingtonian of his day" and declared his name to be "written imperishably on the finest chapters in the history of our city." He assisted in founding the federation and long before it was organized led the fight for citizenship rights for Washington.

A native of the District and a son of Crosby Noyes, newspaperman who led the Washington civic battles of his day, Theodore W. Noyes probably has a better grasp of needs of the city in the light of its traditions than any other man.

He took up the cause of political and fiscal equality for the District in 1887, and has been unremitting in his efforts to obtain full representation in the National Government for the National Capital and to force Congress to assume more of the cost of the District government.

In 1936, as chairman of a citizen's committee, he supervised preparation of a brief which reviewed the whole case for equal District rights and which was presented before a committee appointed by President Roosevelt.

Next to the Star, which he has so capably edited, the veteran has given most of his working years to the cause of beautification of the city and autonomous civic rights for its residents.

Headed Zoo Campaign.

He was instrumental in opening the Washington Zoo and in getting a free public library for the city. He has been president of the board of trustees of the Public Library since 1896 and president of the Oldest Inhabitants of Washington since 1908, the year in which he became editor of the Star.

He is a charter member of several historical societies, and active in the Protestant Episcopal Church. He helped organize St. Thomas' parish in 1891 and is the only living signer of the charter of the national cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul on Mount St. Alban.

Since 1889 he has been a trustee of George Washington University, from which he graduated in 1877 and where he received the honorary degree of LL.D. in 1917.

On Friday—Adelbert W. Lee, president of Randle Highlands Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

William C. DeMille Town Hall Speaker

William C. DeMille, pioneer motion picture producer, will open the second half of the Town Hall season Sunday night at the Rialto Theater with a talk on "Does the Public Get What It Wants?"

Reservations for the remaining lectures of the season are being taken this week at Town Hall headquarters, 950 National Press Building.

Other speakers include David Seabury, psychologist, Feb. 6; Louis Untermyer, poet, Feb. 13; Harry O. Overstreet, philosopher, Feb. 20; and Isaac Marcosson, journalist, Feb. 27.

Speakers at March meetings will be Alexander Kerensky, Russian revolutionary leader; Norman Thomas, head of the Socialist Party; Philip Guedalla, British historian, and Reinald Werrenrath, baritone and Charles A. Ellwood, professor of sociology.

Georgetown Group Hits License Date

Pointing out that many automobile owners are financially crippled immediately after Christmas, members of the Georgetown Citizens' Association Monday night adopted a resolution urging that the date for registration be set at April 1 instead of January 1, so that the District may profit from the gasoline tax paid by drivers who would put their cars in storage if forced to register at the earlier date.

The association indorsed a proposal for some form of arterial highway on K street through Georgetown and went on record as opposed to sale by the District of the Georgetown Market, at Potomac and M streets northwest. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, was admitted to membership in the association.

The Mid-City Citizens' Association asked that speed limits be increased to 25 miles an hour in the midtown district and 35 miles per hour in outlying sections and indorsed a suggestion of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer that drivers' permits carry photographs of the operators.

Girl Awarded $3,885 In Suit Against U. S.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 25 (AP).—Barbara Jean Backstrom, 17-year-old Muskegon girl whose suit was made possible by a special act of Congress, won a $3,885.13 judgment today against the Government.

Miss Backstrom was hurt in a fall on Muskegon pier in July, 1934, and the Congressional act was necessary to allow her to sue the Government.

A. F. L. Rejects World Boycott Against Japan

Declines Bid to Join European Bloc; Will Press Own Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Jan. 25.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor declined today to join European trade unionists in an economic alliance against Japan.

Representatives of Great Britain, France, Switzerland, Sweden, Russia and The Netherlands projected the alliance at Brussels January 15, contemplating governmental embargoes against Japanese goods with a scheme for mutual economic compensation for any losses entailed by the movement.

Deprecate Filibuster.

The council gave assurances, however, that the anti-Japanese boycott voted at the last A. F. L. convention "will be aggressively applied" and said "definite results" already had followed.

The Senate filibuster against the anti-lynching bill was discussed, A. F. L. officials expressing disappointment at the delay to other legislation in which labor is interested. Leaders called for passage of the bill.

The council delayed a decision on the appeal of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor from an order that it oust its C. I. O. affiliates.

Grace Period Hoped.

William Green, president, said the Pennsylvania Federation requested a period of grace until its convention May 10 in view of a "possibility that differences between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. might be adjusted at an early date."

State Federations are being reorganized in Colorado and West Virginia and C. I. O. affiliates have been disassociated from all the other State federations.

The council also deferred action on a request of the International Cleaners and Dye House Workers Union for jurisdiction over dyers and cleaners employed by laundries, who now are organized by the Laundry Workers International Union. The cleaners claimed the pay of these workers was lower than its own scale.

Meat extracts, including fluid, preserved herring, berries, pineapples not in bulk, pile fabrics, cotton manufactures, jute yarns or roving, blankets and similar articles, gloves and mittens, wool clothing, axminster, wilton, brussels and other carpets, hand-made paper, golf clubs and equipment, pearl buttons, various leather materials.

Fishing rods and reels, bicycle tires, copra, works of art, and crude petroleum and products for ships' use.

Angina Pectoris Pain Relieved by A New Operation

London (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—A new operation which connects the heart and part of the abdomen by use of plastic surgery's art is described in Lancet, the British medical journal. The operation is designed to relieve the pain of anginia pectoris.

The abdominal part tied to the heart is the omentum, which is an "apron" or fold of the perineum serving to cover the abdomen. Normally the omentum and heart are separated by the diaphragm.

The new operation, says Lancet, has been done on 15 persons. Ten of these were alive six months afterward. Nine of the ten had lost their angina pains. Seven, who previously had been unable to work on account of the pain, had gone back to their jobs.

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, today called the Securities and Exchange Commission's new short selling rules "a sincere effort" to cope with the problem, and promised co-operation of the exchange in their enforcement.

The new rules, designed to curb short selling in declining markets, are effective February 8.

The Gallup Poll

Syphilis Tests for Mothers as Proposed in New York Approved, 9 to 1.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 25.—Backed by physicians, public health officers and women's organizations, a bill to require expectant mothers to have blood tests for syphilis is now before the New York State Legislature. Passage of the measure within a month is confidently predicted by its sponsors who call it the opening gun in a drive for similar laws in all States to prevent the infection of 60,000 babies born annually with syphilis.

George Gallup

According to the results of a nation-wide American Institute of Public Opinion survey the passage of such laws would be widely approved by the public. Nearly 9 out of every 10 persons polled throughout the nation said each State should require doctors to test expectant mothers for syphilis.

Particularly in favor of blood tests are the women polled in the survey. Their attitude, revealed for the first time, is especially significant because many physicians have heretofore felt unwilling to risk offending their women patients by suggesting syphilis tests during pregnancy. But the survey shows that 9 out of every 10 favor such tests.

Covering a carefully selected cross-section of the population in cities, towns and on farms, the Institute poll asked voters: "Would you favor a law requiring doctors to give every expectant mother a blood test for syphilis?" The national vote was 88 per cent "yes," 12 per cent "no." Among women it was 90 per cent in the affirmative, among men 87 per cent.

Few Majorities as High.

Few public measures on which the Institute has sounded out opinion have received such overwhelmingly favorable majorities. The vote is another evidence of the intense support the public is willing to give the anti-syphilis campaign. Last August an Institute poll found that 87 per cent of all voters would like to have a Wasserman test. Other surveys showed huge majorities in favor of Government clinics for syphilis control and compulsory venereal disease tests for all persons seeking marriage licenses.

Vote Uniform by Ages.

The attitude of women toward venereal disease tests in pregnancy varies little by age groups or by income levels. The survey found that 95 out of every 100 women in the above average economic class favor such tests. The proportion among the average and below average is approximately the same. Among age groups, women below 35 tend to favor the test more than women above 35, but the difference is small.

The bill in the New York Legislature has the indorsement of United States Surgeon General Parran and other well-known health authorities.

Research scientists estimate that more than 90 per cent of the babies born each year with syphilis contracted from mothers could be made free from infection before birth if the mothers were treated.

Following is the vote for the Nation and by groups in the Institute survey:

Senate Bill for Syphilis Fund Parallels Opinion

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, has introduced a bill in the Senate calling for a Federal appropriation of $3,000,000 to help fight venereal disease. If Congress follows the will of voters it will pass the LaFollette measure. Seventy-nine per cent of persons polled by the Institute in a survey last May favored an appropriation for this purpose.

A much bigger sum—$25,000,000—was desired by the majority of voters.

Is British public opinion in favor of a trade agreement between the U. S. and Great Britain? The Gallup Poll will tell you in Friday's Post.

Association of State Highway Officials Warns Any Curtailment in Roads Appropriations Means Boost in Unemployment.

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION of State highway officials told the House Roads Committee yesterday any curtailment in Federal highway appropriations would increase unemployment, after Chairman Cartwright (Democrat), Oklahoma, read to the committee President Roosevelt's letter to him placing on Congress the responsibility if the budget is not balanced, especially if big road expenditures continue to be authorized. The President asked that the funds be curtailed.

Testifying in support of a bill to authorize a $476,000,000 road appropriation for the 1940 fiscal years, C. H. Purcell, Sacramento, Calif., association president, said between 80 and 85 per cent of highway expenditures goes to labor.

He estimated that between 85 per cent and 90 per cent of workers hired on road projects are taken from the relief rolls.

It naturally follows therefore that any curtailment in the amount of funds allowed for road construction by the State highway departments," he said, "will increase the number of people in the group of unemployed."

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE for the disposition of Executive papers has started another year hitting on all two cylinders. The committee has to hit on two or it won't run at all, for it has only two members.

Representative Charles J. Colden, the chairman, is a Democrat. Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart, the rest of the committee, is a Republican. Both are Californians.

The two men decide when Government documents can be thrown away. If the Republican committeeman voted "aye," and the Democrat shouted "no," the tie would stall action, the papers wouldn't be disposed of, and think what that would mean!

Actually, nothing like that ever happens.

When Chairman Colden wants to transact some business he says to the committee's clerk, "Call up Bert," and when the rest of the committee has something on his mind he tells his secretary to "Call up Charlie."

The committee never talks politics.

THE MASK COVERING the trade treaty negotiations with Great Britain is being lifted and textile manufacturers are finding the treaty is a real threat," Representative Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, said.

THE HOUSE REFUSED, by a standing 31-to-22 vote to pay Mrs. Marie B. Neale $350 for "past or future" damages to her 80-year-old home in Charles County, Md., by firing at the Dahlgren, Va., naval proving ground. The claim originated in 1937. Mrs. Neale claimed the guns caused her house to shake, doors and windows to rattle, plaster and pictures to fall and dishes to fall from the sideboard.

The House, however, voted to pay $5,000 to Mrs. Zoe A. Tilghman, widow of William M. ("Bill") Tilghman, shot to death more than 13 years ago by a Federal prohibition agent in the boom oil town of Cromwell, Okla. The claim was approved by a standing 29-to-28 vote.

Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, of the Claims Committee, contended Tilghman, described as belonging to the "Wild Bill Hickok school of two-gun peace officers," was a victim of "lawless conditions in Cromwell."

Conferees Put $10,000 Top on Farm Subsidies

Boost in Size of Checks to 'Little Fellow' Also Agreed Upon.

By the Associated Press.

Proposals to place low limits on the size of subsidy checks going to large-scale farmers have been discarded in favor of a $10,000 top, legislators working on a new farm program announced yesterday.

With this decision to permit payments of this size to the "big fellow," Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said it was agreed to increase somewhat the size of the checks to the "little fellow."

Smith said the $10,000 top would apply only to the amount going to one individual or corporation. Larger payments would be permitted, he said, in cases where all over $10,000 was passed on to tenants or employes.

The original Senate and House bills which legislative conferees are trying to reconcile provided for limitation of large payments. The Senate measure proposed a scaledown of 95 per cent on payments above $2,500, and the House a flat top of $7,500.

Appeals Provided.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, said about 85 per cent of the farmers who participated in crop-control programs had received less than $100, and about 30 per cent less than $20.

Pope said the conferees had provided for appeals by farmers dissatisfied with the marketing quotas fixed for them by county committees. Under the provisions adopted, he said, a farmer could appeal to a special review committee and carry the committee's decision to Federal district and State courts.

$8,521,000,000 Income Received by Farmers

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported Monday farmers received $8,521,000,000 from the sale of their principal products and in Government benefit payments last year.

This was $601,000,000 greater than their 1936 cash incomes of $7,920,000,000.

Father Walsh Lays Unrest on Ships to Soviets

Tells Senate Committee of Report to Moscow on West Coast Strike.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The "organized discontent" in the American Merchant Marine can be traced to Moscow, the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service, told the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday.

Father Walsh, who gave up plans to enter the Naval Academy in order to join the priesthood, and who is an authority on the merchant marine, offered the committee a stenographic transcript of a meeting of the Third Internationale at Moscow in 1935, at which, he said, the maritime strike in San Francisco was discussed officially and plans were made to "do better" in the future. Earl Browder and a man named D'Arcy, he said, were among the American delegates to the Communist congress.

Data Sought on Bridges.

Other develpoments were:

The committee asked Secretary of Labor Perkins to furnish files on Harry Bridges, longshoremen's leader on the Pacific Coast and the man who arganized the 1935 strike. Senator Arthur Vandenburg (Republican), of Michigan, said that because of reference to Bridges as an alien, ordered deported, he wanted the "precise facts."

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, announced the American Export Lines of New York had signed a long-term operating subsidy contract, agreeing to build ten new cargo ships in the next five years. These ships will cost $20,000,000, and will increase America's program to 37 ships at a total cost of $200,000,000.

Algic Seamen Indicted.

Three seamen, logged as deserters from the S. S. Algic in Santos, Brazil, were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Brooklyn, N. Y., on a charge of "endeavoring to make a revolt" aboard the Algic while she was in the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay, September 10.

The seamen are Clegg A. Lowden, 30; Rubel Stewart, 36, and James Lampkin, 32. They came back from Santos on an American ship and were arrested in Brooklyn. Fourteen shipmates recently were found guilty on similar charges by a jury in Baltimore. Joseph Hartley, another alleged Algic deserter, has been arrested in Jacksonville, Fla., and will stand trial there.

Ship Owners Blamed.

The Joint C. I. O. Maritime Legislative Committee sent a 3,000-word report to every member of Congress in which it contended that ship owners, not the seamen, were to blame for unsettled conditions in the American merchant marine. The committee added that the unions already had made great strides toward stabilizing the industry.

"We believe that our program will help stabilize the shipping industry," the report said. "In fact, we have already begun. Wages are becoming standardized, living conditions on ships are improving. The old slave market system of hiring is being abolisher, and, above all, machinery for adjusting disputes is being set up in many ports."

Conditions "Appalling."

Father Walsh agreed there had been some justification for the discontent among American seamen. Living conditions, he said, have been "appalling" in the past. He insisted however, that there was no justification for the "left wing technique" that aimed at taking away the master's authority aboard ship.

Father Walsh said he "regretted" that in the beginning of the turmoil in the American merchant marine, a member of the Roosevelt Cabinet had given "substantial support" to the sit-down technique.

(When the crew of the S. S. California staged a sit-down strike on the West Coast, steps were taken to prosecute them under the mutiny laws. Secretary of Labor Perkins was reported at the time to have protested against this move at a Cabinet meeting, promising to settle the trouble herself. She telephoned Joe Curran, spokesman for the crew, and he agreed to call off the strike. Many such strikes followed, and Curran became leader of the National Maritime Union.)

Subsidy Contract Signed.

San Francisco, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Dollar Steamship Lines announced today a six-months' operating differential subsidy contract had been signed with the Federal Maritime Commission.

The liner President VanBuren, held several days at Bombay, India, pending conclusion of subsidy negotiations, was ordered to proceed immediately on her around the world cruise.

County May Vaccinate Defiant Farmer's Son

Carlisle, Pa., Jan. 25 (AP).—Destitution of his family opened today a channel that may halt the determination of Jack Marsh, Blue Ridge Mountain farmer, to "rot in jail" rather than have his son vaccinated.

As Marsh began serving another 30-day term, the Cumberland County Assistance Board considered an application of his wife, mother of eight children, for relief.

The county might thus become the ward of 8-year-old Eugene and order his vaccination. The same step was resorted to in the case of two other Marsh children.

Wright Stolid As Jurors Hear His Confession

Jealousy Killer's Story Relates Rage When He Surprised Wife.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 25.—Paul A. Wright's confession that he "shot, shot and shot" when he found his wife and his flying friend, John Kimmel, in each other's arms was read today to the jury trying him for murder.

Wright, former airport executive, sat impassively while his statement was read by the prosecution in a courtroom dotted with Hollywood celebrities.

"Things went perfectly white hot," Wright said in his confession . . . "I didn't think . . . I wanted to destroy the vision of that girl sitting there on the piano stool kissing that man and he her . . . I just shot, shot, shot . . . everything that was in me."

The State rested its case shortly afterwards.

A publicity man, Art La Vove, testified Wright told him he shot the pair because they were in an unusual embrace.

"What kind of an embrace?" La Vove said he asked Wright at the Glendale Jail.

"Well, it was quite an embrace—let's keep it clean for the sake of the 'baby,'" the witness testified Wright replied.

La Vove said Wright told him that when he entered the living room and saw them, they turned briefly to him and resumed the embrace.

Earlier, a living model doubled for the slain Mrs. Evelyn Wright and Kimmel. The model was Thornwall Rogers, associated with Defense Attorney Jerry Geisler.

First, Rogers doubled for Mrs. Wright. Giesler indicated with a pointer—on instructions given as testimony by Dr. A. F. Wagner—where the four bulle from Wright's pistol entered Mrs. Wright's body.

Then, with Rogers doubling for Kimmel, Giesler indicated where the bullets entered Kimmel's body. All of the bullets that struck Kimmel were found, Dr. Wagner testified, but only one of the four that struck Mrs. Wright was found in her body.

"Wouldn't this fact indicate," asked Giseler, "that the bullets which struck Kimmel were spent in their force? That they might have gone through something else first—say Mrs. Wright's body?"

Dr. Wagner said autopsies showed alcohol in the brains of both victims.

The courtroom throng included movie actor Basil Rathbone and his wife.

14 Pct. of Inmates Of D.C. Jail Forced To Sleep on Floor

Inmates of the D. C. Jail have been compelled to sleep on the floor by serious crowding. Superintendent Thomas M. Rivers reported to the Board of Public Welfare yesterday.

Record-breaking numbers of prisoners of the first six months of the fiscal year continue Rivers stated.

Average daily population in December was 699 as compared with 599 in the same period last year. On December 20, 109 inmates slept on floors.

Commitments to the jail in the first six months of the fiscal year increased four per cent over the previous year.

"It is hoped that a marked reduction in the population of the jail may be effected in the near future through clearing up of certain cases in court which have been delayed for a varitey of reasons," Rivers said.

Two Who Rode Plane in Fog More 'Air Minded' Than Ever

Skill of Pilots in Handling Craft Lost Aloft for 7 Hours Leaves D. C. Men With Increased Confidence.

Dazed by flashlights and floodlights, surrounded by microphones and cameras, two Washingtonian men, who were lost in an airplane almost seven hours Monday night, were slightly embarrassed heroes yesterday.

"It's a lot of d—— foolishness," said Philip King, of 1725 New Hampshire avenue northwest, employed by the Maritime Commission. "The crew brought that plane in; we didn't."

"That was my first day in the air," contributed C. C. Bane, of Bethesda, Md., shoe store manager, "but it isn't my last. The way they brought us down made me more air-minded than ever."

Pilots in Hartford.

And from Mrs. Bane, who sat at a short-wave radio in her home listening to the plane's pilot carry on a conversation with ground stations, came perhaps the meatiest statement of all.

"I heard the pilot say 'on the ground and safe,'" she said, "and I went to bed: I was worn out."

King and Bane and Mrs. Bane were guests last night of radio station WJSV, where they told their experiences over the air. Then they told their experiences again to a score of questioners.

Fred Jones and James Garrigan, captain and pilot, and Edward Lemieux, steward, who bore the burden of getting themselves, their plane and their passengers down safely through a wall of blinding fog remained at Hartford, Conn., where the plane finally was landed at 3 a. m. yesterday.

"It may seem screwy," King said, "but I've got more confidence in flying now than I ever had before."

Bane's Son Air Cadet.

Bane said he made the trip by air instead of by land because his son, John C. Bane, is a cadet at the Air Corps training school at Randolph Field, Tex., and had urged him, as the father of a prospective Army pilot, to be "more air-minded."

"And I am," he said. "After I saw how crews in the air and on the ground work together and how they use modern equipment and, most of all, after they got us down safely, I'm convinced."

Bane said "about 12:30 we saw some lights and circled for a while. Then he took elevation again, and went on, in the fog. When 1 a. m. came, I turned to King and said, 'Listen, King, there's no need for us to kid ourselves, we might as well face it.'"

Bane strapped himself tightly in the seat. "When it cracked I was going to hold my chin up as best I could," he said yesterday. Then, fingering in his coat pocket, he found a scratch pad and wrote a farewell note to his wife. "I put the note in my leather pocketbook, thinking that if things were burned the note might still be readable," he said.

Mrs. Bane described a time of waiting at home perhaps as nerve-racking as her husband and King were going through aloft in the deadening mist.

"When Mr. Bane didn't come in on time," she said, "I wasn't greatly worried. I thought maybe the plane had been delayed. I called my neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Stone. Mr. Stone got in touch with The Post and got the first reassuring information. Then the Stones came over here and we just sat and waited.

"Nobody thought of trying the short wave radio until 2 o'clock. When we turped it on we seemed to get every airplane in the United States before we realized from the conversation between the pilot and the ground that we had the plane Mr. Bane was on. I don't think I'll ever forget Newark and Trip 85."

Plane Met Head Winds.

Bane and King left Hartford by train early yesterday morning and reached Washington at 12:30 p. m.

The plane left Newark with its two passengers and crew of three and should have arrived in Washington 80 minutes later, at 9:52. It ran into tremendous head winds and heavy fog and Jones decided to turn back. Trying to reach Newark his radio beam became so weak he was unable to distinguish its signals and lost his bearings and did not find them until hours later, when he picked up the New Britain beacon. A few minutes later he was flying along the Boston beam to Hartford and then coasting down the beam for a landing.

He had enough fuel left for about 30 minutes when his wheels rolled onto the field at Hartford.

Auto Afire Toots Own Horn to Call Owner to Rescue

Even in this day of automobiles that practically run themselves the accomplishment of one owned by T. H. Edwards, 203 Cedar avenue, Takoma Park, Md., is nothing short of remarkable.

This automobile calls for help when help is needed. Yesterday morning shortly after 2 o'clock Edwards heard the horn of his automobile screaming and went out to investigate. The machine was on fire.

Edwards played a garden hose on the car while Mrs. Edwards called the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department. After the blaze was conquered, with damage estimated at $350, it was discovered insulation had burned from the horn wires, leaving a short circuit.

Protests Filed On Laboratory At Airport Site

Civic and Congressional Leaders Object to Building at Gravelly Point.

Congressional and civic leaders yesterday protested the construction of a laboratory by the Bureau of Public Roads near the Gravelly Point airport site, which for the first time received the indorsement of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

Warning the construction of the laboratory may hinder the development of the combined land and sea air base, Maj. A. B. McMullen, chief of the airport section of the Bureau of Air Commerce, urged the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee to report favorably a measure authorizing the construction of the terminal.

Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, wrote Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace "to request if the Bureau of Public Roads if possible would hold up construction of buildings . . . until Congress acts upon the Gravelly Point airport bill."

Protests against the building of the laboratory were made by John F. Victory, president of the Aero Club of Washington, and Clarence A. Miller, chairman of the aviation committee of the Board of Trade.

In his testimony, McMullen said Gravelly Point most nearly approached ideal airport requirements of any site suggested for the terminal, but added there were definite limitations which can be eliminated or controlled.

Air traffic, involving planes from Bolling Field as well as commercial aircraft, he explained, would have to be directed from a single control tower to assure safe aerial navigation in the area.

McMullen added that sites with better approaches could be obtained on the outskirts of the city, but pointed out those advantages were offset by the greater distance of the locations from the business and hotel districts.

Others who testified before the committee were P. C. Dorr, of the district Army engineers' office, who declared it would cost approximately $2,000,000 to fill in the site of the Gravelly Point terminal, and E. W. Robertson, who urged the airport be located at Hybla Valley, 9 miles from the city. Robertson quoted Dr. Hugo Eckener as saying that it was "the finest natural location I have ever seen."

Young Officers Slated to Head Service Schools

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said yesterday the Army and Navy had adopted, at his suggestion, a policy of assigning younger officers to be superintendents of the Military and Naval academies.

Mr. Roosevelt made the disclosure in commenting on the assignment of Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, a former Presidential aide, to be head of the academy at Annapolis.

Not yet 56, Admiral Brown will succeed Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, who reaches the statutory retirement age of 64 next month. Almost simultaneously Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, 56, is slated to take command at West Point in place of Maj. Gen. W. D. Connor, who retires February 28.

Told a columnist had hinted there was "something screwy" about the precedent-breaking selection of Brown, the President said it was better to have younger and more active men in charge of training future officers.

Jones Says RFC Heads May Be Reduced to 5

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said yesterday he probably would ask reduction from seven to five in the number of directors of the RFC. President Roosevelt was agreeable to the move, Jones said, adding that it was prompted by economy.

New Hull Note Insists Envoy SeeMrs.Rubens

Soviet's Attention Called to 1933 Letter on National Protection.

By the Associated Press.

A second, and more emphatic, demand that an American diplomat be permitted to interview Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens in a Soviet jail sped by cable from Washington to Moscow yesterday.

Nettled by the recent refusal of the Russians to allow a State Department representative to see the New York woman held on "suspicion of spying," Secretary of State Hull said the refusal was contrary to a pledge given by the Soviets.

"The Government of the United States," Hull's communication said, "continues to expect that an officer of our Embassy at Moscow will be permitted without delay to interview the person whom the Soviet authorities refer to as Mrs. Robinson."

Hull called the Soviets' attention to a 1933 letter from Foreign Minister Litvinoff to President Roosevelt on the basis of which diplomatic relations between the two countries were established. The letter said nationals of the United States would be granted legal protection not less favorable than that accorded to nationals of the most-favored nation.

The most-favored nation with respect to cases such as Mrs. Rubens' is Germany, which has an agreement with Soviet Russia saying:

"In places of detention of all kinds, requests made by consular representatives to visit nationals of their country under arrest, or to have them visited by their representatives, shall be granted without delay."

Marinelli Indicted.

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Albert J. Marinelli, target of several charges since Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey demanded his removal from the clerkship of New York County, was indicted late today on Federal charges of harboring a fugitive from justice.

The indictment was an aftermath of a 1932 election fraud in the Second Assembly District, where the recently resigned court clerk heads the Tammany organization.

Federal investigators have disclosed that applications and affidavits upon which "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson," who disappeared in Russia, obtained their passports were sworn in his office.

Brownsville, Tex., Jan. 25 (AP).—In the last session of Congress Representative Keller, of Indiana, called attention to a gift of grapefruit from Florida and suggested the Texas delegation give Congress a chance to judge relative merits of Florida and Texas fruit.

Today Texas growers loaded 84 boxes of prize grapefruit on a train bound for New York and ultimately Congress. The shipment will be ample for all Congressmen.

2 in Congress May Testify in Gambling Trial

Sen. Reynolds, and Rep. Schulte Hinted as Possible Character Witnesses.

Two Members of Congress, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, and Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, may be called as character witnesses in a gaming trial now being held in District Court, it was intimated yesterday when jurors, being questioned as to their fitness to sit on the case, were asked if they knew the legislators.

The two lawmakers, according to defense attorneys, were patrons of the seafood establishment operated on H street, near North Capitol, only a few blocks from the Capitol.

On trial with him are George Edward Dohoney, Eugene Edward Garges and Nick DiGenaro. All are under indictment for alegedly setting up a gaming table. They were arrested in the recent Police Department drive to stamp out gaming in the District.

Harry T. Whalen, one of the defense attorneys, explained last night he had discussed the possibility of calling the two lawmakers as character witnesses for Anthony DiGenaro.

Police raided the place after a rookie patrolman, Edwin F. Talbot, said he had made ten bets in the place. In his testimony yesterday, Talbot reiterated his statement.

'Wandering' Trolley Car Of the Future Described

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—The trolley car of the future, equipped to leave its wires and wander over the countryside to holiday picnics and Sunday excursions, was described to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers here today.

This is done with the "trolley coach," the street car on rubber tires that runs alongside the curb with long, slanting trolley poles reaching wires strung over the middle of the street. A Diesel-electric engine enables this car to detour from its trolleys while still using its electric drive. Five hundred wandering "trolley coaches" have already been built, said C. M. Davis, of the General Electric Co., Erie, Pa.

Court Ratifies Fidelity Bank Transfer Deal

Dividends to Be Mailed in February to Depositors.

The final legal barrier separating the taking over the assets of the defunct Fidelity Building and Loan Association by the newly formed First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington was swept away in District Court yesterday when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue affixed his signature to an order ratifying sale of the assets.

The price, $3,912,854, represents about 85 per cent of the claims against the Fidelity.

As soon as clerical details can be cleared up the 18,000 shareholders will get dividend orders from the Fidelity receiver. These are convertible into share accounts or cash.

It is expected that these arrangements will not be completed until the middle of next month because of the vast amount of detail work necessary to establish each account and whether the claimant wants cash or stock in the new organization.

Approval of the sale of the assets definitely assures Fidelity share holders that their "fears of forced liquidation are at an end," a statement issued by the board of directors yesterday said.

'Abuse' of Forests In South Assailed

By the Associated Press.

F. R. Silcox, Forest Service chief, said yesterday the South's forests might become a "graveyard" of potential prosperity if "exploitation and abuse" by lumbermen continued.

He said doubling of demand for Southern pulpwood by a growing paper industry and possibility that more Southern yellow pine might be necessary to meet a national housing shortage emphasized a need for proper forest management.

Keep Wages Up, Cut Prices, Plea Of Roosevelt

Roosevelt.

the Cotton Textile Institute and the Southeastern Governors Conference. They discussed the business situation. Leaving the White House, Gardner said business was ready to go ahead if it could be reassured about the future—particularly as to whether "we are going to the right or left."

The high light of the President's day, however, was Mr. Roosevelt's statement regarding maintenance of wages and reduction of prices. It was regarded as significant that it came shortly after John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, told a United Mine Workers' convention that reduction of wage levels would bring about a complete "economic, social and political debacle," and that organized labor would resist such a movement with all its power.

Particularly interesting in this regard is the fact that on February 7 Lewis will begin negotiations with the steel industry for renewal of a wage contract which expires at the end of that month, and that Mr. Roosevelt's declaration was based upon a question inspired by recent remarks before the Senate Unemployment Committee by B. F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation.

His Answer a General One.

The question was, "Do you agree with Mr. Fairless that steel prices can't be reduced without cutting wages?" Strangely enough, Mr. Roosevelt in his formal statement did not answer the question. He confined that statement to placing himself again on record generally against wage reductions and generally in favor of price reductions by the mass production industries. Indeed, later he said he did not know whether steel prices could be reduced without cutting wages.

When he finished reading his statement, he asserted that the reason for his remarks was that it had been found from recent statistics that some businessmen—not many, in proportion to the total—were in the process of reducing wages and that there were whisperings of further efforts on the part of industry to reduce wages.

Asked what action he would take if industry continued to reduce wages, Mr. Roosevelt said he had taken such action by reading his statement. But what step beyond the statement was contemplated, asked a correspondent? That, said the President, was an iffy question, a term he frequently uses to avoid questions based on conditions or contingencies, such as, "if such and such should happen," what would he do?

Mr. Roosevelt said we know price cuts can be made without affecting wages. In what particular industries, he was asked? In lots of them? Could it be done in the steel industry? Mr. Roosevelt replied that he did not know. He was asked whether his stand against wage reductions as just read had not been approved by Lewis, Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Corporation, and Thomas W. Lamont, J. P. Morgan partner, at a recent White House conference with the President.

Not in the language just read, because at that time he had not written his statement, the President replied. The subject of wage reductions, however, had been discussed at that conference and his three callers were opposed to any cuts, Mr. Roosevelt added.

Coal Parley Discussed.

When the President displayed a reluctance to elaborate on his formal statement, the attention of the press conference turned to the conference earlier in the day between the President and the Pennsylvania group. Mr. Roosevelt said his talk with Gov. Earle was along the same lines as last week, namely, the condition of the anthracite coal industry.

Could the President be more specific? Well, Gov. Earle was working to squeeze the water out of coal and put people back to work, said Mr. Roosevelt. Did the visit have any political aspects? Oh, no, said the President. Was not the chairman of the Democratic State committee, David Lawrence, among the callers? Yes; but was not the State chairman also a State official? parried the President.

He was secretary of the Commonwealth but as such had nothing to do with coal mines, a Pennsylvania correspondent replied. If those present knew what had been discussed, asserted the President laughing, it might appear that the secretary of the Commonwealth would have an important part in the deliberations. That might mean the State would take over the anthracite coal industry, suggested a correspondent. You are pretty good, said the President, again laughing. Anyway, observed another correspondent, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic boss of Pennsylvania, had assured the press there was no politics in the visit and that should be final. The President agreed.

"Amazed by Evidence.

Earle, leaving the White House earlier in the day, said the President was still "amazed" by the evidence he had given him a week ago regarding the anthracite coal industry, and that Mr. Roosevelt wished to withhold any commitment regarding the Pennsylvania Governor's proposal that his State take over the mines. Meanwhile, it was said, the President had asked for additional information, which Earle did not specify.

The Pennsylvania Governor and party earlier in the day conferred with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings also regarding the condition of the anthracite industry. It is understood the Justice Department will investigate that situation to ascertain whether the industry has engaged in any monopolistic practices or violations of Federal anti-trust laws.

Cloture Asked To Stop Lynch Bill Filibuster

Lynch.

Brown, New Hampshire; Clark, Missouri; McGill, Kansas; Schwellenbach, Washington; Truman, Missouri; Bone, Washington; Bulkley, Ohio Hitchcock, South Dakota; Copeland, New York; Thomas, Utah, and Guffey, Pennsylvania. One more name, that of Senator W. G. McAdoo, California, was added.

No Republican signed the petition. All signers were Democrats except La Follette, a Progressive, whose father was the greatest Senate long-distance speaker in Senate annals and holds the continuous speaking record.

Gallery Rebuked.

An otherwise dull night session was enlivened by gallery demonstrations that drew a rebuke from Seuator Bulkley, who was presiding.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, protested "there is nothing in the rules to prevent the galleries from smiling at us if they want to."

This brought a round of applause from the galleries. Bulkley smiled complacently, and laid his gavel aside.

The move for cloture followed threats of Southern Senators to "talk six months" if necessary, and a sharp swing of Western Democrats away from the bill.

A bitter floor skirmish for parliamentary advantage, in which Majority Leader Barkley denounced Senate rules as "archaic," preceded the petition attempt to shut off debate.

"We have the most archaic conglomeration of contradictory procedure that ever prevailed in any parliamentary body," Senator Barkley told the Senate.

"The rules of the Senate ought to be so changed that it is a self-governing body, which it is not now. I am prepared to join any group in going before the Rules Committee in an effort to modernize our procedure so that we may transact business here."

The floor clash was precipitated by Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, who vainly sought unanimous consent for quorum calls to be made without taking a speaking Senator off the floor.

Vice President Garner recently ruled that a Senator may only make two speeches on one question, and that if he yielded for a quorum call it automatically completed one speech. Harrison bitterly protested the ruling.

At one point in the tussle, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, co-author of the anti-lynching bill and sponsor also of the housing conference report caught behind the jam, was criticized for holding up the latter.

Wagner was closely questioned by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, a former friend of the bill, but now one of a group of Western Democrats who will vote to sidetrack it rather than tie up Senate business.

The New Yorker denied he had any intention to hold up the housing report, but declared it would become an instrument for further filibuster were it called up now.

A series of unanimous consent requests by Barkley and Wagner followed. They proposed that the anti-lynching bill be displaced temporarily by the housing measure, under strict debate limitations.

Connally, opposition floor manager, objected. He pointed out that the housing report was "privileged" and could be called up at any time without displacing anti-lynching.

Wagner tried again with a proposed agreement for an anti-lynching vote by February 15, but Harrison chided him for "willingness" to tie up other Senate business that long.

New Yorker Chided.

Several times, Harrison's acid tongue turned on the New Yorker. "I see the Senator from New York (Wagner) is whittling away his life in support of this anti-lynching bill," said Harrison. "He gets out of a sick bed to come here. Of course, the whip and spur have been put on him by the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race (People)."

When Barkley denied "important Senate business" is being held up by continued anti-lynching bill consideration, and said blockaded appropriation bills all carried "funds for the next fiscal year," he was challenged by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado.

Adams pointed to a bill to provide delayed payments to growers of sugar cane and sugar beets, and asked Barkley's help to get immediate consideration. But when Barkley agreed to take it up at once on a half-hour debate limitation, Connally asked that it go over until tomorrow.

Borah Again to Talk.

Besides Burke, Western Senators who said they are now ready to vote to lay aside the anti-lynching bill to take up other pending business included Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, and Senator Clyde L. Herring (Democrat), of Iowa. They predicted other Western Senators, former friends of the bill, will take the same course if the impasse continues a few more days.

Word meanwhile reached the embattled Southerners that Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, whose speech against this bill fanned the South into its present adamant stand against it, will make another speech on the bill before the debate concludes.

Tugs Toot Taps as 'Ghost Liner' Leviathan Sails to Her Grave

Former Queen of Seas, Used as U. S. Transport in War, Starts Last Voyage to Scrap Heap Near Scotland's Firth of Forth.

By the United Press.

Hoboken, N. J., Jan. 25.—Six tiny tugboats sidled up to the "ghost" liner Leviathan at Pier 4, Hoboken, today, tooted and fumed importantly for an hour or so, and then guided the big ship down the Hudson River and into the rain-soaked New York Harbor on her last voyage.

The Leviathan sailed at 4:38 p. m. for a scrap heap near the Firth of Forth, Scotland, and some day a British shell may bear a chunk of metal from the ship that Germany launched on the eve of the World War and christened the Vaterland.

During the war, after the American Government had seized it, the Leviathan transported 96,804 soldiers to France and brought back 93,746. Then it failed miserably in private service, partly because prohibition made American ships unattractive to tourists.

A labor dispute which had delayed the sailing since Sunday was settled at a conference aboard ship this morning. British seamen had balked at accepting wages lower than those paid American sailors signed for the voyage. It was agreed finally their pay and bonus would be based on the American seamen's wage scale.

Capt. John W. Binks, the Leviathan's British master, pronounced his ship in first-rate condition for the voyage.

For four years the Leviathan has rotted, rust streaking its white superstructure, paint crumbling from its black hull, rats squealing over its dusty decks. Only its engines have been cared for. It has cost the line which owns it about $250,000 annually, mostly for insurance, just to keep it at the pier. Its value as junk was estimated at $1,500,000.

Many persons have thought up ways to recondition the Leviathan and make it profitable. The latest was to convert it into a floating palace hotel and night club for the allurement of visitors to New York's 1939 World's Fair. But it turned out that Flushing Bay, near the fair site, is much too shallow to accommodate the Leviathan's 39-foot draught.

When the Leviathan nosed into the harbor dusk today with smoke belching from its two forward funnels—the third funnel is a dummy—the royal suite, once occupied by Queen Marie of Rumania, held two American seamen, an oiler and an engineer, who will sleep on Army cots.

And the oaken name plate of the Leviathan, 20 feet long and bearing the ship's title in gold leaf letters on a black background, was hung proudly tonight over the bar of a Hoboken saloon.

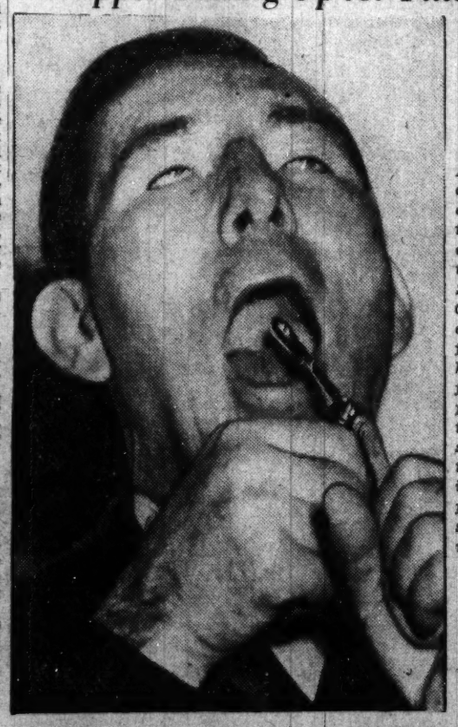
Former Senator's Son Held in Death Of 12 Years Ago

Los Angeles, Jan. 25 (AP).—Accompanied by his father, a former Senator from Washington, Ross Bernard Piles, 45, today surrendered to a fugitive warrant charging him with manslaughter in the death of a street car motorman 12 years ago in Seattle.

"Your honor," pleaded Samuel H. Piles, white-haired former Senator and minister to the Republic of Colombia, "this boy is not guilty of any crime. Te never ran away from Seattle. He lived there for two years andn three months after the accident in which he now stands accused . . . He is willing and ready to go back and clear himself now."

The younger Piles was released on bail of $1,000 pending hearing February 7.

Pepper Tuning Up for Filibuster



A throat that cannot hold its own in Senatorial oratory is of little value to a Senator. So Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, carefully sprayed his throat before he took the floor yesterday to continue his speech against the antilynching law. He filibustered for six hours the night before.

at Lorton, where the maintenance cost per prisoner is far below that of the National Training School. Later, it is understood, the Industrial Home School for Boys on Wisconsin avenue may be moved to the girl's school on Conduit road and the District line.

The Children's Receiving Home at 816 Potomac avenue southeast likewise has been the target of criticism from time to time because of reputed insanitary, unhealthy and crime-breeding conditions.

Under the sub-committee plan, it is understood, a new children's receiving home will be set up in the present old Police Court Building.

Involved in the shift will be the reopening of the old Second Precinct police station at 1224 Fifth street northwest, now occupied by the Woman's Bureau, and the transfer of the Woman's Bureau to the old Police Court Building, which will be vacated with the opening of the new $1,500,000 court structure in Judiciary Square.

Tax Rates Discussed.

Drafting of the District's new tax bill will begin almost immediately after the House Appropriations Committee reports the supply bill, Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said.

The fiscal affairs sub-committee met yesterday to discuss rates for the adopted income, business privilege and realty taxes, but adjourned until today because of the uncertainty of the size of the anticipated deficit.

If the recommended slash in the District budget estimates prevails through the House and Senate, the amount of money to be raised by the revenue sub-committee will be less than $2,000,000.

Any one of the proposed taxes, it is estimated, would raise that amount and more unless the rates are reduced substantially.

Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee revived the lump sum controversy yesterday with an announcement that he would move to increase the Federal contribution from $5,000,000 to $9,000,000.

Indications are however, that the $5,000,000 woll prevail, as even members of the House District Committee, as well as the appropriations sub-committee, are opposed to any increase in the lump sum payment at this time.

A scrap is expected on the House floor over the reported transfer of the $765,000 street lighting cost from the general fund to the highway fund. The transfer was recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Representative Nichols has indicated he will raise a point of order against the shift on the ground that it is in conflict with legislation last year setting up the highway fund and is legislation incorporated in an appropriations bill.

Two Police Items Added.

The District supply bill, it is understood, will have two items designed to fortify the Metropolitan Police Department in its current fight on crime.

Reopening of the Second Precinct station, closed several years ago in a reorganization ordered by Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, will place a station in an area that has the worst criminal record in the city.

While it is understook that no additional patrolmen have been allowed, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, will be able to shift officers and men from other precincts to man the station.

Additional funds also have been allowed the Police Department, it is reported, to broaden its crime-prevention work and undercover investigations.

The supply bill will carry many projects designed to alleviate traffic congestion as Chairman Collins has shown a keen interest in curbing traffic accidents as well as holdups and robberies.

One of the projects will be the first link of the K street viaduct, consisting of an overpass along K street at Rock Creek Parkway. This subsequently may be extended to the Key Bridge.

Underpasses at Dupont Circle along Connecticut avenue and at Thomas Circle along Massachusetts avenue are said to be in the bill along with various street widening items, such as K street in the congested area.

Reductions in the Budget Bureau estimates have been made chiefly in administrative expenses, particularly in the welfare department and the public school system, it is believed.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Fifteen men were injured, one seriously when Trenton's worst fire in recent years swept a block in the shopping district and destroyed nine stores. Unofficial estimates of damage ranged from $75,000 to $200,000.

Lewis Predicts A 'Debacle' if Wages Are Cut

amend the Wagner labor disputes act.

Lewis urged enactment of Federal or State legislation to regulate the anthracite industry—and added that anthracite freight rates should be cut.

Stern Action Threatened.

Lewis threatened that if attempts were made to cut wages in the present recession in "coal, steel, automobiles, glass and other industries" labor would "oppose them sternly and fight to the bitter end."

In his annual report to the union Lewis commended the executive board for the expulsion of Green, whom he accused of "dual unionism."

Big business, through propaganda, always tries to make labor believe that working men are ignorant and cannot understand the workings of industry or legislative activities, Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, told the miners.

"Working men," said he, "must and have a right to turn to their Government for aid when business has put them out of work."

Ford Aide Says Labor Board Backs C. I. O.

St. Louis, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Ford Motor Company began its defense today at a National Labor Relations Board hearing against charges by the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers of America of unfair labor practices at its St. Louis plant.

Daniel Bartlett, Ford attorney, said he would seek to show the Labor Board "is working with the C. I. O. and prejudges all other labor organizations."

Reed Approved Unanimously As New Justice

Solicitor General Expected to Ascend Supreme Court Bench Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Solicitor General Stanley Reed, chief defender of Roosevelt legislation before the Supreme Court, won unanimous Senate confirmation yesterday for a seat on that august bench.

The 53-year-old Kentuckian is expected to assume his new duties next Monday. It will be necessary for him to resign his present position and to take oaths to support the Constitution and to administer justice impartially.

Approval Rushed Through.

He will be the seventy-seventh person to sit in the high court.

So quickly was the nomination approved that few persons in the galleries knew what had occurred. As soon as the clerk read the name of Reed Vice President Garner sang out:

"Without objection——"

By that Garner meant that, in the absence of any protest, the nomination was confirmed.

Reed was appointed to succeed Justice George Sutherland of Utah, who retired January 18 at the age of 75.

May Disqualify Himself.

Whether the new justice will disqualify himself from deciding on litigation with which he was connected as solicitor general may be indicated by the first case to be argued next Monday.

It involves the Government's effort to escape paying $390,000 in income tax refunds to the estates of the late Andrew W. Mellon and of R. B. Mellon. The Government's brief in the case was signed by Reed.

Parkway Bridge Work Is Started

Construction of a new four-lane stone bridge on the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, just below Taft Bridge, was begun yesterday, the office of National Capital Parks announced. Replacing the two-lane span which has been in use for years, the new structure will cost $93,000 and be completed about January 1, 1939.

Flow of traffic will not be halted by the work. One-half the old span will be closed while one-half the new one is being built.

Designed and constructed by the Bureau of Public Roads, the span will be 50 feet in width, including two five-foot sidewalks.

The Federal Diary

Tickets, Please!

When the conductors pass through the train aisles saying, "Tickets, please," it causes anguish to such clerical help of U. S. Congressmen as may be on the train. The Congressmen will fork up a ticket Uncle Sam has paid for; any other functionary of the U. S. Government will hand over a Treasury-paid-for ticket—everyone of Government connection, indeed, except the secretary of the Congressman. It makes the Congressmen's office help very sad, and much poorer indeed, they complained to this column yesterday.

Now in solidarity (through the Congressional Secretaries Club) against the practice of paying their own fare, the organization of secretaries—some 200 strong—says through its president, Harold C. Hagen: Additional facts show that more than 75 secretaries from the far West and deep South, with dependents ranging in number from two to five, find it necessary to expend out of their own pockets from $100 to $500 annually for transportation to and from Washington.

Continuing: Over 100 secretaries are separated from their families during each session of Congress—unable to pay transportation costs both for themselves and their families . . . That two bills aimed at relieving the situation are now pending. A bill introduced in the House by Representative John M. Coffee, of Washington, provides that the secretary or clerk from the office of each Representative and of the chairman of each standing committee shall be paid at the rate of 10 cents per mile, if the trip is made to and from each session of Congress.

Resolution.

Senator Homer T. Bone has introduced an almost similar resolution, which would pay two members of the offices of Senators and chairmen of standing committees mileage at the rate of 10 cents. One of the latest champions of the secretaries is Representative John Dockweiler, of California, member of the House Appropriations Committee, and its subcommittee on legislative appropriations which considers the item of mileage. He has commented:

"Although fully realizing that we are faced with the necessity of curtailing Federal expenditures and balancing our budget, I feel that it is only fair that we right an injustice which has been done the secretaries over a period of these many years. Not only are they the only employes who are asked to travel on official Government business at their own expense but they are also expected to work many more hours than other Federal employes," he said.

The secretaries committee pointed out that estimated travel expenditures for all Government agencies during 1937 would amount to $77,101,006 (in 1936 it actually was $76,669,506) while cost of travel expenses for House secretaries under House Resolution 336 would amount to $86,000 annually, the secretaries argue, adding that Senate Resolution 175, providing for mileage allowance for two members of each Senator's office staff, would require an expenditure of approximately $50,000. And turning back to fire a shot on behalf of the 20-cent allowance for Congressmen, the secretaries say:

"The club vigorously defends the 20 cents per mile granted their Senators and Representatives." They point out that the members travel "within their districts on dozens of public and official matters between sessions without travel expense remuneration. They also expend hundreds of dollars on miscellaneous travel items both in their own districts and in Washington. The expense of taxi fares to and from downtown Government offices runs over $100 annually in many instances," they contend, concluding "All of our hopes on the House side at present are in the hands of the House Committee on Accounts."

The club's committee working for mileage legislation includes: President Hager, Ralph W. Olmstead, with Senator Pope, Idaho; Victor R. Messall, with Senator Truman, Missouri; Charles A. Jordan, with Representative Maas, of Minnesota; Hyman Korn, with Representative Buckley, New York; John Kennedy, with Representative O'Connell, Montana; Paul Olsen, with Representative Coffee, Washington; Harold P. Thoreson, with Representative Sheppard, California; Roberta Messerly, with Representative Kirwan, Ohio; Joseph F. Healey, with Representative Duncan, Missouri; Gore Hinzie, speaker of the Little Congress, with Representative Patton, Texas; William A. Young, with Representative Patrick, Alabama; Harold G. Clark, with Representative Murdock, Arizona, and Stanley P. Williams, with Representative Leavy, Washington.

Baba's Mother Welcomes Her Wrestler-Mate

Ranee of Sarawak Thinks Gregory Is Too 'Good Looking' for Mat.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—The former Princess Baba of Sarawak, whose title belied her British aristocracy, brought her new wrestler-husband to the United States today and her mother, the Ranee of Sarawak, welcomed him with cautiously-opened arms.

The young bridegroom, handsome Bob Gregory, 26, middleweight wrestling champion of Europe, appeared a little timid as he was met at the pier by the ranee, but soon was put at ease.

"Anything my daughters do is all right in my eyes," the ranee said.

Paul Damski, Gregory's manager, said it had taken him two hours to persuade the ranee to meet her daughter and new son.

The ranee countered:

"There was no opposition on my part, or my husband's, to this marriage. But I do think, although I have no objection to wrestlers, and have had no experience with them, that Bob is such a good looking boy that he should have taken up boxing instead of wrestling."

"I am doubtful that I will do any more wrestling," Bob said, and his bride agreed.

The couple said they expected to go to Hollywood, where Gregory said he had several offers, one to play in a picture based on his romance.

The princess is an attractive blonde, 22, youngest daughter of Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, white rajah of Sarawak, a British protectorate in North Borneo.

YOUR MILEAGE MERCHANT ADVISES

TO CHOKE IN WINTER

Through no fault of your own, during past winters, you may have formed a bad habit of "too much choke." Perhaps your gasoline absolutely demanded overtime choking—harmful and wasteful. No need to continue that way with Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronze. You could scarcely keep it from starting quickly, even if you wanted to. But you'll take pride in your skill, you'll save gasoline, and you'll make sure of topnotch starting speed, by using your choke—and Conoco Bronze—in this approved way:

(You may want to tear this out and keep it in the car for the next few days)

Leave ignition *OFF.
Keep clutch pedal clear down.
Open hand-throttle about one-third.
Pull choke out full, if not automatic.
And then—but not before—operate your starter.
Wait for two or three engine revolutions.
Now switch on the ignition.
Be ready to let up on starter.
And you'll know you can promptly begin to push in the choke, as you hear the steady powerful firing of your Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronze.

*If your starter is of the type that does not spin with ignition off, consult Your Mileage Merchant.

food supplies were feared running low.

Fifty school children were marooned in a high school near Ironwood, Mich., while students near Marquette were reported taking refuge in a farmhouse after a school bus became helpless in heavy snow drifts.

Yacht Loses Sail.

The schooner Mavis, trim 80-foot craft owned by Edward Avery, of Washington, lost its mainsail, headgear and rudder in rough waters off Cape Charles and was picked up shortly after 1 p. m. by the Coast Guard cutter Dione.

Towed into Norfolk, the Mavis, bound on a round the world voyage, with Avery and Allen Ham, of Washington, aboard, reported no casualties. Newton Fletcher, skipper of the boat, and Richard Ham, American Automobile Association official, were not aboard.

Fletcher returned to Washington several weeks ago after being injured when the main boom of the ship fell on him breaking two ribs. Ham, due back to his desk Thursday, was unable to continue on the cruise after previous storms had delayed the trip. Their posts were filled by professional sailors at Norfolk.

Cutter Convoys Tug.

The tug Moran, towing the heavy dredge Peru, was being convoyed to the Diamond Shoals Light vessel by the cutter Modoc. All hands were reported safe on the vessels, which rode out a 44-mile an hour gale off Cape Hatteras.

Lost in soup-like fog for nearly seven hours and handicapped by high winds, a Newark-Washington airliner, with two Washington passengers and a crew of three, finally landed at Hartford, Conn.

Hard freezes in Illinois and southern Wisconsin, where hundreds of families were made homeless by floods Sunday, were reported by the Associated Press to have alleviated flood conditions.

Liners Delayed at New York.

In North Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa, the thermometer registered below zero with a reading of 18 below at Devils Lake, N. Dak.

Incoming liners at New York were delayed hours by a 51-mile wind and airline schedules seriously hampered. Gales in the upper part of the State reached 60 miles an hour and small streams rose steadily while policemen in Albany donned hip boots to patrol their beats.

Washington, on the outskirts of the coastal storm, felt its effects only in unusually high temperatures which reached 63 at 4 a. m. yesterday. Dropping steadily after 9 a. m. yesterday, the mercury is expected to reach a low of 24 early this morning.

Much Colder Here.

The forecast for today here is fair and much colder. The Weather Bureau expected the temperature last night to drop down to 24 degrees from a high 54.3 during the day. Tomorrow will be continued cold and clear.

Although rival schools of scientists do not agree on whether sunspots are directly related to weather changes on the earth, two facts emerged last night.

One was that all weather conditions in this country, according to the Weather Bureau, were "violent," and the other was that sunspots rapidly are reaching maximum of their 10 to 11 year cycle.

The sunspots do cause, in a manner not agreed upon by scientists, storms of magnetic currents which can de detected only by delicate instruments.

Compasses Deflected.

The compass needle was deflected as much as two degrees by the invisible and insensible magnetic storm which swirled about Washington, and the rest of the earth, yesterday.

Interruptions in short-wave radio, telegraph and telephone transmission were attributed by astronomers directly to the sun spot activity.

An active spot, which is just disappearing around the edge of the sun, caused similar disturbances in the earth's magnetic field last Friday.

Another big spot, not yet easily visible, may be forming on the sun, or just coming around its edge, it was reported at the Griffith Observatory, Los Angeles.

Appear at Judge Geiger Inquiry

A formal inquiry into the statement by Attorney General Cummings that Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger, of Milwaukee, had obstructed justice by dismissing a grand jury before it could return indictments against several auto finance firms for alleged antitrust law violations was begun yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee. Benjamin Ross (right), representing the Wisconsin Bar Association; H. A. Sawyer (left) and William Doll, Milwaukee attorneys, appeared before the committee.

Combines Heed Only Pressure, Jackson Tells Judiciary Group

Geiger.

Jackson answered:

"No, sir, but it very often happens that we cannot get the evidnece we want except through grand juries."

Jackson appeared to present the views of the Department of Justice, which has charged that United States District Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger, of the Eastern District, Wisconsin, had "obstructed justice" by dismissing a grand jury before it could return indictments against a group of automobile finance companies accused of violating anti-trust laws.

Judge Geiger, in dismissing the jury, did so because of what he termed the impropriety of the Department of Justice in suggesting an apparent compromise in a case where the jury had once voted to return indictments.

To Defer Action.

The committee decided, after yesterday's "exploratory" hearing, to defer action indefinitely on the Attorney General's complaint.

Jackson had described Judge Geiger as "a man of somewhat peculiar temperament. The department was forced to drop proceedings when he objected to our discussions with the finance companies."

"He is a man of years of service," Jackson said. "There is no charge here relating to impeachment. I don't think you ought to impeach.

"But if Judge Geiger is correct that we may never enter into consent-decree negotiations, we must know it in the Justice Department in preparing antitrust litigation."

Geiger Is Defended.

Representatives of the Wisconsin and Milwaukee bar associations, appearing at yesterday's sessions, defended Geiger as a man of "known integrity, uprightness and honesty." They declared Geiger had acted correctly on the assumption that the Justice Department was trying to use the threat of criminal prosecution to obtain a civil consent decree.

Chairman Sumners announced, after an executive session:

"We have decided that up to this time we have received all the evidence and assistance which this group is able to give. We will have the record printed and will examine it. How far the committee will go and what more we may need, I don't know."

Benjamin Poss, of the Wisconsin Bar Association, told the committee that more than 16 years ago Judge Geiger had declared his court "may not be used as a club to obtain settlements of cases."

He said the Justice Department knew in 1935 that "his court couldn't be used in that manner," and disclosed he had heard that a Justice Department survey had settled on Judge Geiger's court in which to prosecute its anti-trust suits against the automobile finance companies because he "ranked first in honesty, reliability and integrity."

He added:

"You can not get away from the fact that from all the judges in the country, in all the 48 States in which those companies operate and where litigation could have been brought, the department chose the one district where there was the one judge who publicly declared two years ago while a grand jury was in session that it was improper to negotiate for a civil settlement of the same cases.

"If this were a court of law, the Department of Justice would thereby, by that very fact, be foreclosed from bringing any charges against Judge Geiger."

"Pressure" Necessary.

But Jackson vigorously upheld the department's anti-trust procedure. He said:

"You can never get evidence if you don't use pressure. There is no doubt that unless there is the possibility of criminal prosecution we could never get a consent decree in any of these anti-trust cases.

"It is a matter of public policy. The public is interested primarily in having the monopolistic practices stopped, not in the punitive phase. After all, the punitive phase is comparatively small."

When Representative Earl C. Michener (Republican), of Michigan, asked what the department hoped the committee would do, Jackson replied:

"The committee, of course, is at liberty to approve or disapprove the practices involved here. The department has merely brought its grievance to the only available place."

Jackson had declared he was not asking that the judge be "punished," but another Assistant Attorney General, Brien McMahon, had asserted business in the judge's court was conducted in a "very dilatory" manner; that he had refused to appoint a probation officer for his court, preferring to dismiss outright prisoners who might be subject to probation; that the sentences imposed by him were at wide variance with those imposed by other Federal judges.

Jackson had asserted Judge Geiger once continued an embezzlement case for two six-month periods and then dismissed the indictment, although the defendant had pleaded guilty. He added that continuances were given in the face of criticism from the senior circuit court judge in that area.

CATHARTICS A BAD HABIT

If you have common constipation, due to lack of bulk in the diet, the great objection to pills and purgatives is that they only perpetuate the trouble.

Why not encourage elimination with a natural laxative food—with Kellogg's All-Bran. It absorbs moisture and softens like a sponge. This water-softened mass aids elimination. At the same time it improves intestinal tone because Kellogg's All-Bran contains the intestinal tonic vitamin B1.

ent objective of 1,910 to 2,050 ships by 1941 would be stepped up by possibly 400 planes. The Army's Baker board objective of 2,320 planes by next year also appeared headed for increase.

Chairman Edward T. Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee, declined to comment on details of the reported expansion, but said he was "confident it will receive the support of the country when President Roosevelt makes his position public."

"We went over the entire international situation and the building programs of other nations with a view to determining what we ought to do to prepare for defense of this country," said Taylor. "Some may oppose the increase in Congress, as they have in the past, but I am convinced it will go through."

Accompanying Taylor were Chairman Carl Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee; Chairman Andrew J. May, of the House Military Affairs Committee; Chairman J. B. Snyder, of the House Army Appropriations sub-committee, and Chairman W. B. Umstead, of the House Naval Appropriations sub-committee.

The President's message is expected to be brief and to the point, making recommendations for the specific authorizations considered necessary to achieve the objective of adequate defense.

Under Congressional rules, the authorizations must first be approved by the regular legislative committees and voted by Congress before the appropriations to get the program under way can be considered.

At his regular press conference, the President confirmed reports that his defense proposals will be messaged to Congress later this week, but again declined to give details. No estimates of cost were divulged either by the President or the visiting House leaders.

Increases would be over and above the $553,266,494 regular 1939 Naval appropriation bill already voted by the House under existing authorizations, and in addition to the Army appropriation bill now in preparation.

It has been estimated that a 20 per cent increase in all Navy categories would add to present authorizations the equivalent of 37 to 39 war vessels, including 3 new battleships and 2 airplane carriers. In addition, some 45 auxiliary vessels have been proposed.

In advance of the message, the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday held hearings on a bill to add 2,200 commissioned officers to the regular Army, raising Army commissioned personnel to 14,650. A similar recommendation is expected to be included in the President's message.

A Good First Step.

Representative Palmisano's revolt against the policy of reducing the Federal contribution to the District while local expenses are rising demands the attention of every thoughtful member of Congress. As chairman of the House District Committee he realizes that this strangle-hold is partly responsible for the disgraceful local crime and health records of recent years. His call for a change, in justice to the District's voteless citizens, comes at a time when more effective community service is recognized as being imperative.

As recently as 18 years ago the Federal Government was providing roughly half of the District's revenue. Ten years ago it contributed 26 per cent. If the so-called lump-sum should be held to $5,000,000 again next year it would amount to little more than 10 per cent of the budget. With that severe proportionate shrinkage of revenue designed to finance the extraordinary expenses of Washington as the Nation's Capital, it is not surprising that essential community services have been grossly neglected.

So Mr. Palmisano's desire to reverse the policy of recent years will be warmly welcomed. He would restore the Federal payment to $9,000,000, which is approximately the sum which Congress recognized as due the District from 1924 to 1932. That would be a substantial improvement over the Budget Bureau's arbitrary proposal. Yet it must be recognized that the figure suggested by Mr. Palmisano does not represent a scientific approach to the current problem of fiscal relations between the District and the Government. It would afford temporary relief without solving this long-standing dilemma.

The effort of the chairman of the District Committee to rescue Washington from the effects of an irrational policy would be more effective if it had the backing of expert advice and thoughtful arbitration. More is at stake in the fiscal controversy than additional revenue. The issue ought to be removed as a bone of contention between Congress and the District so that other municipal problems can be approached in more constructive fashion.

Mr. Palmisano's plan would be improved, therefore, if he would sponsor a bill creating a fiscal relations committee composed of one representative of the District, one from the Treasury and a neutral expert who might well be appointed by the Federal District Court here. The annual recommendations of such a body would carry a prestige that all members of Congress would respect. Fair treatment for both local and national taxpayers would be assured.

Perhaps it is too late for any such committee to function in respect to the 1939 budget. But Mr. Palmisano's reasonable plea for a higher lump-sum now would be greatly strengthened by an accompanying bill authorizing a permanent and more scientific solution of this difficult problem.

Red Cross Aid For China.

Americans have never been behindhand in digging into their pockets for funds needed to relieve the victims of far-reaching disasters, both at home and abroad. Whether the occasion was a flood in the Mississippi Valley, famine in India, or a great earthquake in Japan, our national generosity has been quick to respond to pleas for aid.

So it seems certain that a quick response will greet the appeal of President Roosevelt for $1,000,000 to be expended by the American Red Cross to aid suffering civilians in war-torn China. The plight of the victims is not the less acute because this time the result of a man-made disaster rather than the work of nature in a malevolent mood. Natural catastrophes, indeed, could scarcely have precipitated such wholesale, such widespread, and such protracted suffering as has been inflicted by the Japanese invasion.

The cause is of the worthiest. Red Cross societies in other nations are participating. And under the practiced leadership of this organization perceptible mitigation of the present plight of millions of inoffensive Chinese civilians may be expected. Nonetheless the humanitarian aspects of the problem the Red Cross seeks to handle cannot wholly be divorced from the political and economic background.

It is ironic that while, on the one hand, we are preparing to aid the victims of Japanese ruthlessness, on the other hand we continue to provide the wherewithal of destruction to those responsible for the calamity which has made a shambles of China. Deprived of the funds which American purchases of Japanese goods place in their government's hands, the Japanese militarists would today find it increasingly difficult to prosecute their undeclared war, with all its ghastly aftermath of anguish and desolation.

Groping For A Power Policy.

As the scope of the TVA controversy expands there is obvious danger that the central issue will be confused rather than clarified. President Roosevelt seems disposed to consider the suggestion of Wendell L. Willkie that the Government buy private power facilities in the Tennessee Valley as systems, at prices to be fixed by arbitration. Senator Norris insists that if such purchases are made they should be left to the TVA. And Representative May is conducting a vigorous campaign to delay construction of the proposed Gilbertsville Dam designed to increase the TVA supply of power.

The net effect of these cross-currents is further to emphasize the absence of any clear-cut policy on Government operation of power facilities. When this experiment began the sale of TVA power was regarded as a "yardstick" to measure the reasonableness of private rates. Now the trend seems to be toward complete elimination of private competitors. That is quite a different issue. Before Congress decides whether to take over private generating plants, transmission lines and distributing systems in the Tennessee Valley it ought to set up a more definite general objective than any which may now be found in the TVA act.

If the policy of the Administration is public ownership of power facilities, then negotiations for the purchase of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation's properties at a fair price will be entirely in order. But if the Government is to sell power only as a by-product of flood control and navigation projects, it should take the opposite course and eliminate subsidized competition so that private companies can extend their facilities free from the overhanging threat of socialization. It is difficult to see how any substantial progress can be made in any direction until the future course of the TVA is thus determined.

To extend the TVA's authority so that it may buy the entire power companies, as Senator Norris suggests, would indicate a policy of exclusive Government ownership in the Tennessee Valley without providing satisfactory procedure to that end. The inference is that the TVA would be empowered to take over private properties at its own price, or even proceed to crush them through subsidized competition. But Congress is scarcely likely to sanction for governmental use a policy of ruthlessly "freezing out" competitors which it has so frequently condemned in private business.

Without waiting for new legislation, the TVA has decided to renew negotiations looking to the purchase of such private facilities as it considers useful to its own system. But the private companies cannot reasonably reply to such offers until they know what the Government's long-range policy is to be. In these circumstances Congress has a definite responsibility to investigate the whole situation and reshape its policy so that neither the TVA nor the utilities will have to continue fumbling in the dark.

More Light On Silver.

In an article published yesterday in The Post, Herbert M. Bratter raises a number of very pertinent questions concerning our purchases of silver from Mexico.

He asks why we should pay more than is necessary for silver, assuming that we have to buy it at all. And why agree to take over Mexican silver, in particular, to the amount of 35,600,000 ounces at a rate of 45 cents per ounce besides agreeing to buy Mexican newly mined silver at the same price during the coming year? The mystery of these arrangements is deepened by reason of Mexico's contemporaneous seizure of the property of American citizens and the raising of her import duties against American goods.

The Treasury has explained that but for its timely interposition, Mexico would have been compelled to sell her accumulated silver below world prices. But this is an explanation that raises more knotty questions. In the first place, it is an official confession that the price of silver now stands at artificially high levels. And what excuse is there for paying Mexico or any other country more than its silver is worth, except for favors received or about to be received? If the Mexican arrangement had been made contingent upon counterconcessions, it would at least have had some excuse for coming into existence. But it is followed by a punitive Mexican policy toward the United States.

Senator Pittman likes to argue that the domestic silver producers are in receipt of a limited subsidy representing only the difference between the price paid for domestic silver and the prevailing world price of about 45 cents per ounce. But the Treasury's open admission that we are buying Mexican silver to keep the world price from collapsing explodes this convenient theory. The domestic producers now receive a special bonus equivalent to approximately 20 cents per ounce above world prices. And they enjoy in addition the benefit of the indeterminate subsidies paid to producers and holders of silver in all parts of the world, as a result of the Treasury's price-boosting silver purchase policy.

By Order Of The SEC.

Last November Chairman Douglas of the SEC demonstrated that short selling by professional floor traders and speculators had aggravated the severity of the autumn stock market declines on certain days of exceptionally heavy losses. He also pointed out that short selling represented a large part of the total trading in a few market leaders and that a few members accounted for a large proportion of all short sales.

The results of the commission's inquiries to which Mr. Douglas referred undoubtedly tend to refute the time-worn argument that short selling exercises a stabilizing influence on market values. With evidence to the contrary, the SEC has now issued an order forbidding short sales except at prices above those at which the last transaction was completed. This is virtually equivalent to banning short sales in a declining market, except by the odd-lot dealers exempted from the order.

At present the New York Stock Exchange forbids short sales below prevailing prices but, as the record shows, the rule has not been sufficiently effective. The new and more stringent order should be valuable in preventing extreme fluctuations resulting from manipulative short selling. Obviously, it offers no protection against declines resulting from business recession. The commission itself says that while the rules are designed to curb certain harmful uses of the short sales, they cannot affect the underlying causes of market movements.

One significant fact about the present order is that it marks the first occasion on which the SEC has actually issued a regulation. Heretofore the exchanges have been permitted to adopt their own rules after consultation with the commission. The net result is, as Chairman Douglas said a short time ago, "that of all the rules now in force governing the trading activities and practices of the New York Stock Exchange, in accordance with the requirements of the law, not one was formally adopted by this commission."

That can no longer be said, now that the SEC has acted to impose a regulation upon members and nonmembers engaged in short selling. This is a step which may possibly inaugurate a more aggressive attitude on the part of the commission toward the regulated exchanges. If that should be the case, the present order will have an importance disproportionate to its probable effect.

Chairman Douglas served warning a short time ago, at any rate, that the problem of short selling as well as other questions constituted a challenge to the exchanges. And he then asked whether the exchanges should be left as in the past to regulate much of their own business or whether there should be an "immediate and more pervasive administration directly by the commission of all phases of exchange business coming within the purview of the securities exchange act of 1934."

Down The Abyss.

"Anyway, there is virtually no protection against the planes at night. And that is something to which the world must resign itself in all future wars."

In this matter-of-fact fashion, in itself an eloquent commentary on our times, Herbert L. Matthews writes a Barcelona dispatch to the New York Times. The prospect he emphasizes is hardly a pleasant one for any thinking and feeling individual to contemplate. It shows to what an awful extent the world has been sliding down the abyss of savagery and barbarism.

War has always been evil and cruel. But war as it is waged today transcends in horror all that has gone before. And yet not the least frightening aspect of present-day wars is the fact that the world outside has grown callous to their horrors.

The daily bombardment of a city the size of Madrid or Barcelona, the destruction, looting and rapine which went on in Nanking after the Japanese arrived—these and similar developments leave people cold.

We have lost the capacity to cry out against such wantonness. Our only emotion is one of gratitude that, thank heavens, we are as yet spared. But the winds of disaster blow stronger and stronger and it is certain, if anything is certain, that should world chaos spread with its inevitable concomitant of increasing barbarism, no nation and no people will be spared.

It is claimed an 1,800-mile railroad in Siberia has been built in recent months "in absolute secrecy." Maybe so. In the early 1930's railroads in this country operated trains without the knowledge of the general public.

We never have believed there are umpty-billion germs on a dollar bill, as bacteriologists contend. If that were true, as many dollar bills as we've had to kiss good-by, we would have had everything from measles to hydrophobia long before now.

"If the blowing of auto horns worries you, you're neurotic," declared a psychologist. It isn't the actual noise of the horns that gives one a pain in the neck; it's the fact that supposedly sensible beings blow the darned things so everlastingly much.

During a recent week-end nine persons died in Cleveland of drinking anti-freeze compounds. Those who can't enjoy life without drinking anti-freeze solutions should first have their innards copper-lined.

Britain And Palestine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to submit my warning lest our people do create any feeling or start any movement which will embarrass Great Britain in its dealing with the Palestinian question. We should take it as a distinct act of presumption on England's part if in our dealings with the Philippines or of any like situation, the British should hold meetings and make speeches in protest of our way of doing things.

Great Britain has the mandate over Palestine and Great Britain has never failed to do its part toward the Jews of the world. No well-informed person can seriously think that the British will in this juncture do less than their duty. Certainly it is not for the United States to take them to task in this delicate handling of two antagonistic peoples.

Palestine is surrounded by a cordon of Moslem countries. To the north, east and south, not to speak of the peoples farther east, Moslem millions are ready to withstand any encroachment upon what they claim as their land just as we claim the territory covered by the United States, nevertheless, the American Indian may have prior right. In fact, the Spanish and the French could claim our territory on mere priority.

I am speaking not as an anti-Semite, but as a pro-Semite, when I say that no disaster could be worse to the modern Jews than to have full possession of Palestine now. With the present Moslem feeling that would occasion a British army constantly to guard the Jews from annihilation. Antagonisms are here, by implication, which would make Jewish life in Palestine, if Jews dominated the country, a region of discord. The plan of partitioning the land is a compromise that is the only one as yet seen to be feasible.

A Present To Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United States of America has generously offered the Philippine Islands their independence in 1946. Since 1934, when Congress passed the act promising these islands their full liberty, affairs in the East have changed completely. Today we realize that the Philippines could not last for one day as a republic. For the United States to give them full independence will be tantamount to handing them as a present to Japan.

It is imperative for the interests of the Philippine Islands, the United States and for European civilization in the Pacific that the United States forever maintain naval bases in these islands. Under no circumstances should America leave these islands.

I sincerely hope that the United States will no longer be swayed by its pacifists. They have already brought enough discredit on the illustrious name of America. The United States was built by fighters and fighters are needed today to defend American rights and interests.

Spanish Relief Funds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I say a word in reply to Madam Elizabeth Wilson's Spanish relief report letter in your columns of January 16. I agree absolutely with previous correspondents that so-called Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy's effort is abortive and un-American.

But what I object to most is messing in foreign fights and transplanting them here. Why don't these friends of communism go over there? I think we have enough objects of charity and real patrons of real democracy right here at home and enough problems of our own to be solved without intermeddling, aiding and abetting Spanish or any other foreign communists in their destruction of churches, breaking up of families and misrepresenting their attitude toward free expression or personal freedom.

If German communists are organized as Friends of Spanish Democracy I can see good reason for Hitler and company limiting the export of cash per capita. All these thousands of dollars collected by friends of Spanish Communists should be far better spent on democracy propaganda here, and on victims of all our planned extravagance, increased Government debt and planned scarcity. Such foolishness is bound to run amuck, as it is doing, and to run into a worse shrinkage of market values and worse depression than could happen under a Hoover.

Advice To Pinks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to recommend that the pinks and reds of this capitalistic Nation of ours take a half day off some time and read "Assignment in Utopia," by Eugene Lyons, who for six years was chief correspondent for the United Press in Moscow. A 16-page condensation of the book appears in Readers' Digest for January. Comrade Lyons went a Communist, full of anticipation, and returned to this country thoroughly disillusioned about the Russian form of government.

Pets Vs. Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the larger cities and also in the smaller towns of the country, one sees all manner of dogs and cats being pampered and living in the lap of luxury, while humans—children and adults—are lacking even the necessities of existence.

Why can't these pet owners adopt children, or even small families, rather than bestow their excess wealth on dogs and cats?

A Calendar Of Events.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following is compiled from official public statements and from articles in financial bulletins and newspaper reports.

October, 1936, sit-down strikes of labor began and continued during the early part of 1937.

In the latter part of 1936 and early part of 1937, heavy accumulations of manufactured and semi-manufactured goods as well as of raw materials existed, accumulated in view of threatened strikes and rising prices.

In April, 1937, President Roosevelt warned that prices of durable goods were too high and that the Government would stop buying.

At the end of April, 1937, the Federal Reserve Board put into effect the third of its credit controls by boosting reserve requirements of member banks to the full legal limit.

The President about this time warned all Government officials and employes to get out of the stock market, which frightened not only the 600,000 or more Government employes, but also State employes and all investors as to the soundness of securities. The President ordered retrenchment in Government expenditures in order to balance the budget.

From April onward stock and commodity prices turned downward.

In September, 1937, steps were taken to tighten credit terms of both new and used automobiles, as well as requiring larger down payments, while credit associations recommended a higher basis for installment purchases, which naturally curtailed purchases.

As a result of all the above-mentioned occurrences, confidence was shaken and the stock market in October, 1937, crashed, and with it nearly everything else declined.

At the end of 1937, with all business indexes down to new lows, business returned to the point where it started upward in 1935.

According to the record as above outlined, who is chiefly responsible for the recession?

Mice Or Militarists?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sympathy of all loyal citizens should be extended to the undefended and persecuted militarists who toil constantly in Government service without their allotted quota of military leave.

There is a major crisis staring all of us in the face when a few pacifists and communists disguised as ordinary citizens are able to control the actions of those intrepid gentlemen in brass hats and dungarees. Are we mice, or are we militarists? If loyal citizens of the type represented by "R. L. B." who wrote recently in these columns, are not allowed to eat their cake and have it, too—how long can we hold off the Japanese from creeping across the Potomac some night and taking back their cherry trees?

The Sales Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A sales tax, in addition to hitting hardest at those least able to pay, is like a vampire sucking the warm blood of purchasing power from the body of prosperity.

Money For Ships But Not Policemen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To a realistic mind it would appear that the danger of being slugged on our streets by a holdup man considerably exceeds the danger of being invaded by a foreign foe.

So in the name of national defense our "representatives" rush through Congress a $550,000,000 appropriation for naval construction, and then on the plea of balancing the budget they carefully cheesepare $1,000,000 from the District appropriations.

Another form that our national economy takes is to leave the feeding of half-starved school children to the overworked philanthropy of a small group of unselfish individuals whose own incomes are by no means in the upper brackets, since there are no public funds available for this "socialistic" purpose.

But if national defense is the actual motive back of the "biggest peace-time naval program in history," as is so persistently asserted and reiterated, might it perhaps be a pertinent question to ask who is to man the big guns? Undernourished, anemic youth do not make an invincible army.

Is it possible that national defense is not the real motive, but only the pretext for these vast expenditures of public funds? Just as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson was the pretext for which a $10,000,000 appropriation was recently obtained, designed to destroy the Tidal Basin by filling it up with asphalt, concrete and cement.

The one assured enormously profitable contracts for the Cement Trust, the other for the Steel Trust.

I do not often phophesy, but please let me venture to predict that there will be a definite decrease in "War Clouds Over Europe" headlines as soon as all of the huge appropriation bills have been signed.

The Post Impressionist

Geologist.

WHILE I was waiting for a friend in a small hotel I sat down beside a man who was asleep. He looked about 45, and he wore a coat and pants that were gray, but not of the same shade. He was clean, but his clothes were unpressed, and they exuded that distinct camphor-sulphur smell of fumigation which is quite strong in the Public Library reading room. I hadn't been sitting there long when he woke up, rubbed his eyes, and yawned, staring almost frantically around him for a second as if here were trying to find out where he was. Then he grinned awkwardly at me and asked for a cigarette. He had round, blue, childish eyes, a sparse mustache, and about two days' whiskers.

I handed him a container with one cigarette in it, and while he was getting it out he said, "I gave it up for ten days. They're too hard to get when you're on the bum, and I hate to ask people." He took out the cigarettte and looked at the empty container. "That's the last one," he said. "You'd better keep it."

"I've got another pack."

"You sure? All right, then." He lit the cigarette and crushed the container in his hand, looking for a place to put it. There was a big hole gouged through the red upholstery and the hair stuffing of the chair. He pushed the wadded paper into it and winked at me. "Somebody'll see it and wonder what dope put it in there."

• • • •

"Have you been in Washington long?" I asked him.

"Off and on for quite a while. I'm waiting around now trying to get a car to drive West. The farther West the better. But I want to go as far as St. Louis, anyhow. I've been doing mineral research and I want to consult some books there at the Jefferson Memorial. The last time I was there they wouldn't let me see them, but I say they haven't got any business with them if they won't let people see them, and the next time I go there I'm going to get them or know the reason why."

"You're writing a book on minerals?"

"Yes. A history of subsoil exploitation in each of the 48 States, with a bibliography of material dealing with the development above the ground. I've been working on it since 1931, and I'd have had it done by now if it hadn't been for my relatives."

"Don't they want you to do it?"

"No. They're jealous. They've always been jealous of me and tried to keep me from doing what I wanted to. One of them's a professor, and they've got a couple of kids in college now, and they're all afraid I'll get ahead of them. It was the same way when I wanted to farm. Every time I saw a good piece of land they grabbed it up before I could get it. They just don't want me to have anything."

"Did you plan to write your history when they wouldn't let you farm?"

"Yes. That was in 1928. I've been working on it ever since, and I had it just about finished a few months ago. Then I had to leave them. They wouldn't give me any peace. That's why I'm on the bum now. I had to spend $400 to get myself back in shape. They had worn me out, I tell you." He sat up straight and folded his hands over the ends of the chair arms. "I couldn't work or eat or sleep. So I left them and went to a hotel and did nothing but rest for three months. Then when I started to work again I found that somebody had beat me to do. Now I can't use a lot of my material because it's copyrighted."

"But they couldn't copyright your material, could they?"

"They have. It's the same thing I was going to write and now I'll have to leave out a lot or it'll be a duplication."

• • • •

He stepped on the cigarette. "I can't work here, either, as long as I'm on the bum. I can't get the right kind of rest. They keep you up till 10 o'clock in the mission I stay at, then you eat and take a bath, and it's 11 before you get to bed. And they get you up at 6 in the morning."

"That would make it hard."

"Why, listen. You know what they've got in Brooklyn? It's a new hotel, one of the Lyons houses, with a big bright tile lobby, almost like this one, except that it's bigger and brighter and the floor isn't cracked. You get a good clean army cot with a locker for a quarter, and you can sleep as long as you want to. That's what they ought to have here. They'd make plenty of money.

"I guess they would. Wonder why somebody hasn't done it?"

"I'd do it if I could get the money to start with. I'd open a flophouse here and make plenty, I tell you. That's just what I'd like to do."

Fair Enough

Sorrows Of The Rich.

DUE TO a queer loop in the thinking of a people who have always regarded poverty as a handicap, there is a disposition nowadays to excuse the errors of the scions and scionesses of the idle rich on the ground that wealth, too, is detrimental to character and an obstacle to individual achievement.

PEGLER.

This argument was advanced in all seriousness in a court case in Oklahoma a few years ago on behalf of a spoiled young man accused of a serious sin. It was contended that because he had never had to do chores in his spare time and had always had pocket money from his parents he had never had a chance and should be judged as leniently as though he had been born in the most degraded poverty and raised without a proper appreciation of the difference between right and wrong.

The same apology is frequently offered for that element of young bar flies of both sexes who make up the Children's Auxiliary of the Night Club Society of New York and Palm Beach.

SOCIAL WORKERS insist that when families are disrupted by poverty and drink the children's chances in life are seriously impaired, and the man or woman who rises from such environment to a position of leadership and wealth in the community is recognized, briefly, at least, as a remarkable person and saluted with a nice biographical piece in some magazine. Before long, to be sure, the same person may be accused of having forgotten his or her difficult beginning and charged with trampling on the necks of the masses on the way up the slope. It is difficult to please.

According to the reasoning which regards poverty, squalor and drunkenness in the family circle as a handicap to the young, the children of the rich would appear to be ideally situated and without excuse for failure. But it cannot be denied that in many cases the home life of the rich has points in common with that of the very poor. There is likely to be liquor trouble in the penthouse as well as in the cold water tenement of the slums, the only difference being in the quality of the grog.

Many rich children are neglected, too, and it is hardly necessary to call names to remind anyone who reads the papers of families in which both the father and mother have gone romancing and set their scions and scionesses an example which, in the case of the poor family, would be regarded as most immoral. This example is the worse because it usually occurs about the time of life when the scions and scionesses are beginning to keep track of the score, but a social worker would not think of intruding to mend things for the sake of the bairns. They probably are away at school, anyway, or might be playing about in Europe.

IT IS often said of one of the most profligate young drunkards of the day that he was all right as long as his father lived and kept him at work for comparatively small wages. His raising had been good, but when he got his inheritance he put his affairs in the hands of a responsible house so as to have no distracting cares and set himself to the work of becoming a bum. In this he has achieved a famous success, but he gets no credit for that, and is generally regarded as a horrible example of the evil effects of wealth on a young man.

A famous young woman of great riches is held blameless for the condition of the people to whom she owes her wealth on the ground that she never had a chance to take a job herself, even as an amateur, and doesn't know, except in the vaguest way, that people work.

And while efforts are made to improve the condition of the poor and underprivileged youth so that they may not become bums or criminals, efforts are made also in some of the schools to which rich men send their young to simulate the plainness of the freshwater school in which the students work their way by pressing pants and serving as waiters and dishwashers.

One even hears of rich individuals who have "risen above" their environment to become useful, one-wife citizens—a puzzling twist indeed—suggesting that the overprivileged also have legitimate claim on the Nation's personal management, solicitude and individual service lest they come to no good end.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Good Trick—If They Do It.

Washington now proposes that the automobile and other industries stop producing cars, etc., when production has been at such a high pace that a decline in the demand might be expected.

• • • •

All this requires is the abolition of salesmanship, a clamp on the promotion departments, a suspension of American imagination and the discovery of somebody not interested in drumming up new business.

• • • •

Can you imagine the head of the automobile plant getting the sales force together and saying sternly, "Now, boys, remember one thing: don't push our product too much! There's always the grave danger we might sell too many cars?"

• • • •

Can you picture the motor plant running full blast, with new orders pouring in, and the general manager suddenly rushing to the front with a dramatic, "Stop! This has gone far enough!"

• • • •

That overproduction causes troubles and contributes to slumps is beyond question, but the Government has its work cut out for it if it thinks the whole psychology of American business can be changed by a few wrist motions.

• • • •

Job No. 1 in such a task will be to find an imaginative business man who can look a rush of orders in the face and hang up the telephone on the ground that business is getting too good.

• • • •

The Government has tried many novel experiments but this is the first big experiment in outlawing optimism.

• • • •

Business Drama in One Act.

The scene is the president's office in the Great Northern Garters plant. Business is swell. The sales force is gathered for the morning conference.

President—Gentlemen, our figures show that Great Northern Garters, Inc., did the largest business in its career last month.

Sales Manager (taking the news very gloomily)—I'm sorry to hear that, sir.

Assistant Sales Manager—I had no idea things were getting so serious.

Sales Manager—It must have been that last national sales drive of ours.

President—I'm sorry to say that it was a great success and brought in orders from everywhere. We have made the country North American Garters conscious! From every city and town in the land there comes the demand for our garters! Business has never been so good, damn it!

Sales Manager (very guiltily)—We are very sorry, boss, to have built up consumer demand to such proportions.

President (with an air of finality)—Let us not waste words. There is but one thing to do. As I just said, last month's business was colossal. I want you to go out and all work together to CUT IT IN HALF FOR THIS MONTH!"

Boy, is this an era of bright ideas or is this an era of bright ideas?

Misled.

Washington has now come out for larger down payments in installment buying. Take the case of the big depression: if Uncle Sam hadn't gone on the assumption that he had seven years to pay for it, he might be all right today.

Swedenborg

250th Anniversary Of Birth Of Great Swedish Scientist, Philosopher And Theologian To Be Celebrated Saturday.

By Dr. John R. Swanton.

THE TWO hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Emanuel Swedenborg, which occurred on January 29, 1688, and is being widely celebrated by his admirers, renews attention to one of the most remarkable characters of history, a man so any-sided that he made distinguished contributions to several branches of science, aided materially in advancing the industries of his native Sweden, and attained distinction as a philosopher and theologian. On one and the same day he could lead the conversation with geologists, physicists, physiologists, metallurgists, engineers, statesmen, philosophers—and angels.

Swedenborg was descended on both sides from families intimately connected with the mining interests of Fahlun, in the present Kopparberg Province, but his own father, Jesper Swedberg, many of whose characteristics he shared, was a successful minister of the state church who finally rose to the position of Bishop of Skara, was known as a poet and philologist, and noted for his breadth of view, his utter fearlessness and his earnest endeavors to promote education. His attempts to improve the Swedish hymn and psalm book served to bring upon him the charge of heresy. Heretic or not, he was popular with his sovereigns and was ennobled together with his family by Queen Ulrica Eleonora in 1719, the family name being then changed from Swedberg to Swedenborg.

Emanuel graduated from the University of Upsala in 1709. In 1710 he visited England bent upon the pursuit of scientific studies then advancing rapidly in the United Kingdom under the stimulus supplied by Sir Isaac Newton, whose works he studied daily, and he made the acquaintance of Flamsteed, Halley and Woodward, through whom he was introduced to other members of the Royal Society.

His thirst for learning at this time appears to have been unquenchable. Not merely was he an omnivorous reader, but he was in the habit of boarding with various craftsmen and learning from them their several trades. In Sweden he had already acquired the art of bookbinding and made shift to play the cathedral organ. In London he added in this way some knowledge of watchmaking, cabinetmaking and the making of mathematical

Later, in Holland, he learned how to grind lenses for microscopes. But he devoted most of his time to mathematics and astronomy and also acted as agent for the small group of men in Sweden who were beginning to interest themselves in scientific studies. He returned to his own country in 1715 after about two years in England, visiting on the way Holland, France and northern Germany, his enthusiasm for scientific work throughout that period being evidenced by his correspondence with his brother-in-law, Eric Benzelius, librarian of the University of Upsala. From these letters it appears that his mind was also busy with attempted inventions, and among them he mentions a submarine, a hydraulic engine, a new type of lock, a fire engine, a machine gun, a mechanical musical instrument, a mercury air-pump and an airship.

Active In Large Construction Projects.

RETURNING to his native land full of plans for the promotion of learning, he found his efforts constantly thwarted by indifference, vested interests and shortage of funds due mainly to the imperialistis enterprises of Charles XII.

Although thwarted in this direction, Swedenborg went to work industriously to establish a scientific journal, the first number of which came out in 1716. It lasted until 1718, though only six numbers appeared in all. The year in which the first of these saw the light he was given a position on the board of mines, which had supervision over the great mining industries of the country, but he was only an "extraordinary assessor," serving without salary, and in the early years of his incumbency he was detached at times for special services under Polhem. The most striking of these was the transportation overland from Stromstad to the Iddefjord, a distance of 14 miles, of two galleys, five large boats and one sloop, to assist Charles XII in the seige of Frederickshald (now Halden), Norway, in 1718.

Besides the activities above enumerated he was busy with a scheme for the extensive production of salt in Sweden, plans for a new slow-combustion stove, a new method of detecting mineral veins and a decimal system of coinage and measures; but he found, like many another progressive before him, that, in his own words, "speculations and arts like these are left to starve" and "are looked upon by a set of political blockheads as scholastic matters which must remain in the background, while their own supposed refined ideas and their intrigues occupy the foreground."

Psychological Break Occurred In 1745.

BETWEEN 1743 and 1745 occurred the psychological break in Swedenborg's life which has attracted the greatest attention to him and may perhaps be said to have made him more noteworthy than famous. His first period closed with a work in semipoetical style entitled "The Worship and Love of God," in which he attempted to present his philosophical views in a unified form. Immediately afterward came the long series of writings on which rest his claims as a theologian.

From 1745 until his death in London, on March 29, 1772, he continued indefatigably the writing and publishing of his theological works, which, including unpublished manuscrips, number 83 titles, while his papers on science and natural philosophy number about 120.

The former brought into existence the religious body usually known by his name, Swedenborg having been, I believe, the only man with claims to scientific eminence who founded a religious sect. It may be added that he himself took no active part in the foundation and died before it came into existence.

The fact must not be lost to sight that a unifying thread runs through Swedenborg's cosmic views from 1717, when he penned a few brief paragraphs "On the Causes of Things," until the end of his career. The later works amend and change the applications of his cardinal principles but do not abolish them.

One of these is the doctrine of series and degrees based on the assumption that gravitation, magnetism, light and sound exist in elements of progressively less subtlety, the lowest being the atmospheric air, and that they originally came into existence in this order, that because they are composed of substances from these elements there is a similar differentiation among minerals, plants and animals.

• • • •

The Doctrine Of The Greatest Man.

THIS CREATION of the grosser out of the subtler and subsequent modification by the subtler gives us the doctrine of influx. Instead of approaching simplicity, however, as we ascend the ladder of degrees, we are really coming to more complex entities, or at least entities with greater potentialities, and therefore we have immense varieties in the mineral kingdom and still greater varieties in the vegetable and animal worlds. Each specific variation in any of these kingdoms has its reason for existence, not its immediate cause, in something in a higher degree to which it corresponds, and this is his doctrine of correspondences. The forms which minerals and organisms have depend upon their lesser or greater correspondence with reality itself, or God, who is to be conceived of not as personal or impersonal but as superpersonal, inorganic substances being the most remote and partial reflections of Diety, vegetable species a closer reflection, animal species a still closer reflection, and man the closest of all. Individual men are themselves but partial reflections of the great reality and so tend to become linked together into larger and larger bodies through division of functions, the sum total of which is an increasingly more perfect image of Deity. This is the doctrine of the greatest man.

Swedenborg has been found worthy of respectful, often of enthusistic, consideration by thinkers as diverse as Balzac, Coleridge, Carlyle, the Brownings, Coventry Patmore, Emerson, James Freeman Clark, Phillips Brooks, Henry James, sr., August Strindberg, Theophilus Parsons, John Bigelow, Helen Keller, Edwin Markham and many more. He was first widely known as a theologian and for his placid and unruffled claims to spiritual illumination, publicized by such works as Kant's "Dreams of a Spirit Seer" and Emerson's essay on "The Mystic" in "Representative Men." Only at a relatively recent period have students been aware of the immense volume of scientific and philosophical study which went before.

Two Miltons

By Bertram Benedict

The Poet And The Politician.

JOHN MILTON, was sworn in as a member of the Senate on January 24, despite charges against him filed by Labor's Nonpartisan League. The charges were referred to the Senate Committee on Elections.

The new Senator from New Jersey is a close political ally of Mayor Hague of Jersey City, to whom the vacant Senate seat was offered before it was given to John Milton. Presumably Senator Milton shares the Hague views on the propriety of barring C. I. O. organizers, sympathizers and literature from Jersey City. Because of this fact, and the fact that the Senator from New Jersey bears the same name as the great Puritan poet and pamphleteer of three centuries ago, it is of interest to compare the Hague views on freedom of speech, press and assemblage with the views adduced in John Milton's classic, "Areopagitica," published in 1644.

Mayor Hague elaborated his views in an interview granted a New York City reporter on January 11. "The people here do not want the C. I. O. to come in here and disrupt things," he explained. "That's why they are behind me, and if that picture makes me a dictator, why, we ought to have more dictators like this in the country."

AS FOR THE "deportation" of the C. I. O. delegation as soon as it reached Jersey City—"Only about 40 of them came, all outsiders . . . The police met them and escorted some of them to the city line, just as we have escorted strike-breakers out of town in the past when we feared an importation of violence in labor disputes. Some we arrested for distributing circulars in violation of a local ordinance."

They went peacefully, didn't they? (the anti-Red mayor pointed out). The police (only) wanted to keep these outsiders who had no business here out of the city. Nobody has complained of being beaten or even of being spoken to harshly. That shows they have gone willingly. Those who wouldn't go were arrested and taken to court, with full protection of their rights.

Who are they to talk about constitutional rights? Did they have any regard for constitutional rights, or for any law, when they sat down and took possession of factories, stores and business offices all over the country last year? Do they have any regard for constitutional rights when they throw mass picket lines around a plant and refuse to let its owners use it, or men who want to work get in and out?

IN 1643 John Milton's 17-year-old wife left him, after only several months of marriage. Thereupon he published three pamphlets supporting incompatibility as grounds for divorce. These pamphlets were neither licensed nor registered, although Parliament had recently enacted that all publications be licensed by one of the official censors and be registered with the Stationers' Company. In 1644 the Stationers' Company brought the matter to the attention of Parliament. Thereupon Milton published Areopatigica," in the form of a speech to Parliament. The title came from the Council of Elders which had met on Areopagus Hill in ancient Athens, and which finally replaced the Athenian monarchy.

"He that can apprehend and consider vice with all her baits and seeming pleasures, and yet abstain, and yet distinguish, and yet prefer that which is truly better, he is the true warfaring Christian," Milton proclaimed. "I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unsheathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race . . . The knowledge and survey of vice is in this world so necessary to the constitution of human virtue, and the scanning of error to the confirmation of truth, how can we more safely, and with less danger, scout into the regions of sin and falsity than by reading all manner of tracts, and hearing all manner of reason?"

"IF IT BE desired to know the immediate cause of all this free writing and free speaking," the great Puritan continued, "there cannot be assigned a truer than your own mild, and free, and human government . . . Give me the liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties!

Though all the winds of doctrine were let loose to play upon the earth, so truth be in the field we do injuriously, by licensing and prohibiting, to misdoubt her strength. Let her and falsehood grapple. Whoever knew truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter? Her confuting is the best and surest suppressing."

Signs Vs. Scenery

Let us give you a contrast between conservation and destruction. From Plymouth, N. H., to North Woodstock, runs a fine State highway. On one side is the tumbling Pemigewasset River, the chief tributary of the Merrimac. To the right and left steep hills rise abruptly, and towering above them the great mountains of the Franconia range. This valley might have been designed to be one of the fairest spots on earth. Yet the 20 miles of roadside is now one dreadful, reeking slum of tourist camps, filling stations, Come On Inns and Robins Nest Rests. The natives call it Flush Toilet road.

Beyond North Woodstock the State steps in. One enters Government land. The flush toilet signs abruptly end to be replaced by tall trees, flashing brooks and the natural tangle of roadside. The driver, taut and tired in his seat, suddenly breathes deeply and his clenched hands relax upon the wheel. Stopping to gaze up the cliffs of Cannon at the Old Man of the Mountain, instead of a raw, touting commercialism, he finds dignity and peace. He will come again and bring the family.

The administrator need not advocate the States as against individual enterprise, but one can certainly point out to individual enterprises that if they do not adjust themselves to preserve some semblance of the dignity of the surrounding environment in areas like this, the scenery resource will presently be valueless.

(Stuart Chase in Survey Graphic.)

"GONE WITH THE WIND" is being "openly pirated" by the firm of Zuid-Hollandsche Uitgeversmaatschappij, according to the Publishers Weekly . . . MISS FREYA STARK, author of "Bagdad Sketches," says that in the Arabian Desert there is a great need of signs requesting people not to strew the desert with paper bags, celophane wrappings, peanut shells and such litter . . . Please don't tell us they are beginning to cut down the shade trees because they interfere with traffic and because the roots clog up the sewers!

Tom McCarthy

Mid-Year Exams.

HE'S A CADAVEROUS sort of a young man. I mean, he's at least moderately thin, and sort of serious looking. But actually he's the surprise type. It would probably be going overboard to say that he has a decided resemblance to Fred Astaire.

McCARTHY.

"I'm a columnist," he said. So I said, "Glad to meet you," because I always get a kick out of meeting a writer.

"I write for the Hoya," he said.

"Hoya, yer'self," I said, not to be outdone.

"I'm a college columnist," he said. "I'm one with a message. My name is Detmer. John Detmer. I do a column for the Georgetown University paper, 'The Hoya.'"

Well, that sort of eased things a bit, because for a moment I thought I was being kidded.

"We're having examinations," he said.

"I can understand that," I said, "because I'm having trouble with my own expense account."

"It's not that," he said. "It's things like philosophy two and three, and history-one that's worrying us. I mean, the professors sort of catch us off guard. We're having a tough time."

I was nothing if not sympathetic.

"We're honest," he said. "We're doing more cramming than cribbing. But it's weakening our digestion. It's causing us to go around with circles under our eyes that look like those old ads for Micehlin Tires."

"You're tired," I said.

"Thank you," he said. "I will sit down." And he slid into a chair.

"I don't want to be controversial," he said. "But I think the straits were in need of exploitation."

I told him to draw up a chair, inasmuch as he was already comfortably seated.

• • • •

"THE TROUBLE is," he said, "everybody is going around as though nothing were happening. The sun shines bright. The air is sweet. People are living . . . and liking it. But we are not!"

He looked particularly sad, and he smoothed out a corner of his English drape coat, when he said it.

"We," said he, "are in the midst of examinations. We are studying. What we do between now and Friday will make the difference between a life spent with the Morgans and the Vanderbilts and a life as a service station operator for Standard Oil. Capitalistic though our leanings may be, we don't want to fill gas tanks for Standard Oil.

"First, there is the matter of studying at night. Now, other college students simply study. But up here at Georgetown, we have to avoid the corridor prefects. They protect our health. They make us turn out the lights at midnight. That calls for ingenuity.

"Mostly, we use the cardboard backs of laundry boxes across the transom. That keeps the light out of the corridor. Then comes the task of muffling the light. We slave in our rooms with a black scarf across our heads, a book beneath our eyes, and the light is muffled by the scarf. We're preventionists.

"Then, there is the problem of getting up in the morning. Of course we have an alarm bell at 6:45, to get us out of bed. But that doesn't do any good when you're cramming for exams. We're now on a 4:30 a. mfi to 5 shift. We work all hours.

"So far the best system devised is the 'hidden alarm' method. You know as well as I do that if you go to bed at 2 you can't get up at 4:30 without pain, if at all.

"There's where the 'hidden alarm' comes in handy for college students. Normally we put the alarm clock beside the bed. During 'cram' sessions it goes everywhere else.

"On Mondays the alarm goes into the first drawer of the bureau. On Tuesdays it goes into the second. By Friday we'll have it in the closet. There's a reason!

"THE HOUR is 5. The room is cold . . . and then it rings! You stumble out of bed. You step on the collar button you've been looking for for the last three days. You're half awake by then. But it's still ringing!

"You head toward the bureau tripping over an odd pair of shoes. And you forget what day it is, and what drawer you've hidden it in! By the time you've got the bureau dismantled and you've walked three times across your newly laundered shirts you've found it.

"You've also bumped your head, stepped on a collar button and closed the window. Then, you're awake! Then you can study.

• • • •

"BUT THE point of all this is that the rest of the city is going around drinking it's morning coffee, while we're drinking three on top of the nine cups we drank the day before. I mean, we get tired of that!

"We're going through the tortures of the damned right now, and nobody knows . . . nobody cares. And it's pretty much the same in every college in the District. But I thought you should know."

And with that he pulled a book on "Cosmology" out of his pocket and left the office with a preoccupied air.

Text of Wage Statement

Text of the statement by President Roosevelt yesterday, regarding maintenance of wages and reduction of prices, is as follows:

Question:

Do you agree with Mr. Fairless that steel prices can't be reduced without cutting wages?

Answer:

I'm afraid it won't help for me to answer that question again.

I have said so frequently—and I do not know how to say more clearly and unequivocally than I have already said—that I am opposed to wage reductions.

I am opposed to wage reductions because the markets of American industry depend on the purchasing power of our working population. And if we want to restore prosperity we must increase, not decrease, that purchasing power.

There may be a special hourly wage situation in some building trades in some localities which so far as the total yearly earnings are concerned may call for different treatment, but even there our primary purpose is to increase and not decrease the total of the annual pay of the workers.

Now as to prices:

A mass-production industry depends on volume for profits. No mass-production industry can expect to make a profit when volume is small. The steel industry cannot make a profit at 30 per cent capacity, but it can at 50 per cent or 55 per cent of capacity. The only way to get volume up is to produce goods for a price the public will pay.

A mass-production industry in its own interest should ask for its products what the people can afford to pay.

But that does not mean that such price reductions can come out of wages. Those who believe in the profit system must recognize that those who get the profits when business is good must bear the losses when business temporarily is slack. Those who get the profits when industry gets the volume are the ones to bear the risk of such price reductions as may be necessary to stimulate and restore volume.

Those in charge of a well-managed and solvent industry should no more consider casting the burden of a temporary business recession upon their workers than upon their bondholders. To cast such burden on the bondholders is financial bankruptcy. To cast such burden on its workers is not only moral bankruptcy, but the bankruptcy of sound business judgment.

Industrialists kill the goose which lays the golden egg when they keep prices up at the expense of employment and purchasing power. Industrialists kill the goose which lays the golden egg when they cut wages and thereby reduce purchasing power. Either policy is self-defeating and suicidal.

If industries reduce wages this winter and spring, they will be deliberately encouraging the withholding of buying—they will be fostering a downward spiral and they will make it necessary for their Government to consider other means of creating purchasing power.

Post Sponsors Fifth Annual Folk Festival

root, and where many new roots have been sprouted.

More of the songs, dances, tales and arts than have ever been seen and heard in one place before are coming to Washington on May 6 for a three-day performance that promises to surpass in color and texture any other folk show ever given.

The show, which is the fifth annual National Folk Festival, will be held in Constitution Hall on May 6, 7 and 8, with The Washington Post Folk Festival Association as sponsor.

Started four years ago by Sarah Gertrude Knott, of St. Louis, the festival has grown to such proportions that 9,000 "actors" from 24 States participated at the third show held in Dallas in connection with the Texas Centennial. Last year in Chicago 27 States sent participating groups.

Congressional groups, State societies, and groups from neighboring States will co-operate to make the festival in the Nation's Capital the most representative the Nation can produce.

Afternoon and evening performances will be given. Informality will be the rule. Cowboy songs will be presented, not as they would be by a trained chorus, but by cowboys and as cowboys sing them. All groups will be the best from their region, selected in regional festivals handled by persons learned in folkways of the different States. They will not be made up of paid performers, but of singers and dancers who have known their "parts" from childhood.

Informality to Rule.

Because of the informality and sheer-fun nature of the festivals which Miss Knott has directed, it always has been a question "as to whether the audience or the players themselves had the best time."

For leaders of folklore societies and other interested in the historical and more serious aspects of folk ways, morning conferences will be held. These conferences will be open to the public.

An exhibit of folk crafts and arts will be on display.

"The general joy of the whole company witnesses the recreational values of the National Folk Festival and also the preliminary merry-making throughout the country—which provide the infectious and picturesque numbers on the festival program.

"Though the festival is primarily a joy-giving, colorful affair, the sociologists and other serious minds see its worth in the lives of the American people," Miss Knott said.

She is of the opinion that belief in the strong fiber and resilience of the Nation's people will be reinforced as the audiences come to Constitution Hall "to watch their fellow-Americans from different sections gayly swinging their partners, weaving patterns of old folk dances, and lifting their voices in old songs and ringing choruses"

Paul Green President.

Paul Green, North Carolina playwright, who won the Pulitzer prize, is president of the National Folk Festival. His State each year contributes much in the way of folk plays, of which Green himself is recognized as the leading author. Frederick Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, is a director of the festival.

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, of the American Youth Foundation, and Dr. Vaud A. Travis, of Oklahoma, are vice presidents. The national executive committee is made up of leaders well known throughout the country. Among them are Horace H. F. Jayne, director of the American Federation of Art; Elizabeth Conner Lindsay, dean of King-Smith Studio School; Helen Hartness Flanders, archivist of Vermont folk songs; Arthur Kyle Davis, University of Virginia; Frances Densmore, Smithsonian Institution; May Gadd, director of the English Folk Dance Society of America; Martha Beckwith, Folklore Foundation, Vassar College; Arthur L. Campa, of the University of New Mexico; Elmer Kenyon, Theater Guild, New York; G. L. Kittredge, English department, Harvard University; George W. Hibbitt, English department, Columbia University; Stith Thompson, Indiana University.

In addition to serving as a record of the social life in early America, and later America as well, the festival will furnish a basic leisure-time activity program and present material which may inspire future artistic creations.

As a result of previous festivals many songs, legends, dances and superstitions have been garnered that otherwise might soon have passed from the American scene. Various small groups had been interested in 'song catching," preserving our various speches and dialects on victrola records, writing down dance turns—but until Miss Knott began her work there had been no movement to catch the color of them all in one big national pageant.

Among groups which have come to the festivals as participants in other years and can be expected this year are many Indians from different tribes; anthracite miners, whose songs have lightened their labors for many years; old sailors, with their chanteys; Spanish and Mexicans from the Southwest, Cajuns from the "Land of Evangeline," Germans from Pennsylvania, cowboys, lumberjacks, white spiritual singers; mountaineers from the Ozarks, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Kentucky; Negroes from cotton fields, rivers and cornfield.

Miss Knott, who was at one time connected with the University of North Carolina, had wide experience in the drama field before founding the National Folk Festival.

"With life changing to meet modern living conditions," she says, "a new attitude toward folk music and dances had to be developed if they were to survive.

"If our people have sufficient vision while this material still is a living force, there is no reason why there might not be a transition from the unconscious traditional art to a conscious traditional art, keeping the sincere honesty and simplicity of expression that characterize the folk.

"The contribution of the folk-songs, music and dances of Old World origin give us a richness and cultural background. The newer ones add vitality and the color of a new country.

"The combination puts us in an enviable position in the folk field."

Racketeers Roam District, LaRoe Charges

Post Staff Photos.

Many "big-shot" racketeers are still at large and operating in the District, Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the parole board (left), yesterday told an open forum session of the Criminal Justice Association. Above, Dr. James A. Nolan, association director, and Vincent Sacardi, forum chairman.

D. C. Will Feed Pupils if Fund Is Appropriated

Commissioners Ready to Ask $34,000 to Cover Free Lunches.

The District Commissioners were prepared yesterday to ask approval of the Budget Bureau for a $34,000 defficiency item to provide free school lunches for the remainder of the school year.

If the Budget Bureau and Congress approve the item, the feeding of hungry school children will become a function of the District government, administered, under the sponsorship of Director of Welfare Elwood Seal, as a WPA project.

To provide lunch money pending action by the Budget Bureau, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced that the Board of Commissioners decided to seek allocation of unused FERA, CWA and WPA funds.

District to Release Fund.

At the same time Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Citizens' Permanent Committee for the Feeding of Hungry School Children, announced she would receive $1,717.39 held by the District for the credit of the school lunch fund, "just as soon as the red tape is cleared."

In a letter to the District Commissioners dated January 12, Mrs. Boyle, as president to the Citizens' Permanent Committee, Inc., successor to the Citizens' Emergency Committee, asked that the money be turned over to her committee as soon as possible.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, replied:

"The records of this office indicate that on October 20, 1937, the sum of $10,000 was deposited in the trust fund account by the Citizens' Emergency Committee; that under the date of November 1, 1937, an additional deposit by the same parties for the same purpose was made of $5,300."

Money Owed for Milk.

He added:: "It will be necessary that there be furnished this office evidence of incorporation and minutes of the meeting of the corporation indicating its successorship to the rights of the Citizens' Emergency Committee.

"Upon receipt of this information, a voucher will be prepared for your signature for refund of the balance, from which will be retained only the amount necessary to cover contingent obligations."

Mrs. Boyle said she needed the money to meet a $1,400 bill for milk supplied in January.

"I don't want to be owing anyone any money," she declared.

Sen. King Demands D.C. Crime Showdown

Senator William King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, last night assailed Washington crime conditions and summoned Maj. Ernest W. Brown and the Commissioners to his office for a "showdown" Saturday morning.

"I am dissatisfied with the lack of administration in the District," said Senator King. "We are going to have a showdown in connection with this growth of crime. I want you and you (pointing to Maj. Brown and Commissioner Sultan at the A. A. A. traffic banquet in the Willard Hotel) to come to my office Saturday."

Senator King said he wanted to find out "who is to blame" for present lawless conditions. He promised legislative aid "if that is the answer to our problems."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents Wesley Howard, violinist (Hattie Howard, accompanist) in Rankin Memorial Chapel Tuesday night. Program: Sonata in E major (Handel). Slavonic Dance in G minor (Dvorak-Kreisler), Praeludium and Allegro in the Style of Pugnani (Kreisler), Chaconne (Bach), Three African Dances (Coleridge-Taylor), Cradle Song (White), Ramah (Dett), First Movement of Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn).

An earnest and serious musician, Wesley Howard reflects those qualities in his playing, which is more scholarly than imaginative. Equipped with a good technique and a keen ear for pitch, he draws a firm tone which has clarity both in lyrical phrasing and in figuration. Only a sincere feeling for musical meaning, however, saves that tone from being dry, for it lacks the glow which corresponds to poetic zest.

Yet there is emotional intensity inherent in the tune, albeit disciplined and reserved. In the classical numbers on his program this concentration was abundantly in evidence. The Handel sonata was given its right stylistic treatment, and the best playing of the evening was expended upon the reading of the Bach chaconne. It would seem that Mr. Howard is most at home in those types of music which are strictly ordered.

What militates against his eloquence in the freer poesy of music is the weakness of his rhythmic accents. More positive assertion in these accents would increase the vitality of his playnig and enhance its definition of phrases.

failure to provide legislative remedies covering that phase of gambling. The House District Committee, he pointed out, repeatedly has refused to tighten local gaming laws to include the "numbers" evil.

At yesterday morning's session of the criminal justice forum, following a talk by Joseph E. Dayton, director of the Board of Rehabilitation, suggestions were offered from the floor to petition President Roosevelt for aid in stamping out that thriving racket.

Asks Prohibition.

Harry A. L. Barker, an attorney, proposed an executive order be issued prohibiting Government employes from playing the "numbers" on threat of dismissal.

"And every businessman in Washington should issue the same order," said Barker. "This system would stop the numbers racket overnight—but I have no idea such a thing will be done."

Dayton also assailed the widespread gambling craze, adding that he could "set his watch by the regularity with which a numbers collector passes his office."

The lack of uniform sentences for major crime offenses in Washington was blamed by Dayton as responsible for a great portion of the present problem.

It is up to the judges of our several courts, he said, to offer aid in this war on crime by imposing consistent and impartial penalties. He urged long-term sentences for habitual criminals and "repeat" offenders, pointing out one State provides a life sentence for a fourth felony conviction.

Tripled Since 1930.

The average population of Lorton, said Dayton, has tripled since 1930. More than 25 per cent of the inmates, however, are not residents of Washington. A total of 31 States are represented on the Lorton roll today, he said.

Both Dayton and LaRoe urged the Washington Criminal Justice Association to study sentences imposed for major crimes with a view toward obtaining the co-operation of judges in making the penalty fit the offense.

Poverty and economic distress, said LaRoe, are major factors in the local crime problem.

"And not only do these conditions breed crime," he declared, "but they make almost impossible the rehabilitation of paroled prisoners. It profits little to deal with the manifestations of crime if we do not attack its causes."

The fact that crime records contain the names of more colored residents than white, said LaRoe, is not because colored men are more criminally minded, but because distress and poverty are more prevalent among them.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, described crime as "a large community problem." He urged the abolition of slums "and all conditions which contributed to our problem."

Dr. James Allen Nolan, managing director of the association, announced that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, will speak at this morning's meeting. Dr. Nolan also outlined purposes of the forum discussions, explaining they are open to the public and designed to bring about a better understanding between residents of the District and the problem confronting their law enforcement agencies.

Vincent J. Saccardi presided at the morning session yesterday, and Newbold Noyes acted as chairman at the afternoon meeting. Forums will be held today at 11:30 a. m. and 4:45 p. m., and tomorrow at the same hours.

Seaman, Hero of Shanghai, Returns and Is Jailed Here

Was on First U. S. Ship to Enter Port After Fighting Started.

William Joseph Sullivan came back to Washington yesterday and learned the disillusionment that so often comes to returning heroes.

Within a few minutes of his arrival he was clapped into jail by police, who hadn't heard he was something of a hero of the Japanese assault on Shanghai.

Last nigh; Sullivan, 38-year-old seaman, slept in a cell at the Third Precinct Station, consoled only by knowing he was a lot safer there than running a Sino-Japanese crossfire at Shanghai as a member of the crew of the U. S. Steel Traveller.

The Traveller was the first United States vessel to enter Shanghai after the start of hostilities. Last October Sullivan walked out of a Listrict Police Court, and a few hours later signed on Traveller at Baltimore.

There was some confusion as to how and why he walked out of Police Court. He was charged with a minor offense. When the case against him was completed, something apparently went amiss.

Yesterday it developed that a 30-day sentence against him had been suspended, but he was held until police could make certain.

Sullivan, who served in the Navy during the World War, sailed for China under Capt. T. J. Flannery. Skipper and membres of the Steel Traveller's crew were commeended by Admiral H. E. Yarnell for entering Shanghai port in spite og the danger.

WILLIAM JOSEPH SULLIVAN.

"We were under cross fire all the time," Sullivan related yesterday. "It was a pretty ticklish job to reach the International Settlement without getting hit by stray bullets."

When Sullivan is released, he said, he will return to Baltimore and again ship to foreign ports.

"Even the Whangpoo River is better than this," he grinned, behind the bars.

Band Features Electric Guitar At Madrillon

Lotus, 10 Years Old, Gives Birthday Ball Each Night This Week.

By Chanticleer

Seems like the Madrillon Orchestra, under Johnny Shaw's supervision is always seeking something new. Last week we mentioned the tin ife as a new piece of equipment. This week, the orchestra is going Hawaiian and one of the first electrical guitars in the District is in the hands of Hugh Barteman. Shaw predicts it will be one of the most popular band instruments. We found several of the visiting notables as guests of the Madrillon during the last week. Among them were Gov. Hallaway and Senator Thomas, both of Oklahoma, guests of Earl MacIntosh at a stag dinner.

There's a birthday ball every night at the Lotus this week. The reason is the celebration of its tenth birthday. Dick Lam has brought to the Lotus one of the largest shows since the place opened. Harland Dixon and his eight Manhattanettes doing a beautiful parade number with Sylvia Brant and Shirley Hart direct from the New York revue. Then there is Zingo, the nationally known Hollywood horse who can prance around, tap and act coy while his vivacious mistress, pretty Faith Hope, urges him on. Lorgnette holders suspect a couple of men in disguise. But the antics of the lively "Shetland pony" provide amusement for young and old.

Back From Europe.

The dance team, St. Clair and Evon, returned from Europe with a new black fantasy which they feature. Also Harry Bernie does tapping and Claude and Corinne do a comedy Apache number that is guaranteed to send you home in good humor.

Sammy Ferro, the volatile drummer in Paul Kain's orchestra at Wardman Park Hotel—whose spontaneous wise-cracking during the whole time the orchestra is playing keeps both orchestra and patrons at nearby tables chuckling—is apt not only on the trombone, saxophone and cornet, but on the vibraphone.

The new dance team at the Raleigh Pall Mall Room, Billy Faye and Dolly Wellington, are getting a big hand. If you need some practice on the Shag and Big Apple, be sure to go early, for there is free instruction between 9 and 10 each evening.

Country Dance Night.

Wednesday night is "Country Dance" night. Dolly and Billy will add a "country dance" to their regular program. The versatile Eddie Daniels will do an impersonation of "Uncle Ezra," and the young ladies from Virginia Hunter's dancing school will be there with appropriate numbers.

After becoming definitely enthralled with the black art of Otis Manning at the Mayfair, we find he has gone to a new location in St. Louis. A new entertainer, now on his way here, will be announced soon.

Today's songs will be tomorrow's favorites should be the theme song of the Three Merrymakers at the Ambassador Hi-Hat. It was six years ago they first started to sing Bei Mir Bist du Schoen, which is now one of the season's favorites.

New faces appear this week in the Bamboo Garden's floor show. Nessley and Norman, a smooth ballroom team; the Dancing Debs, Bill McIntyre, as the comic M. C; Rita Conway in high kick acrobatic numbers, are some of the special attractions. Russ Cullen and his band provide music.

Spanish Dancer.

The Maryland Club Gardens have a clever Spanish dancer, Lita Moya, and Kitty Dangler, who charms the evil eye of live serpents in her snake dance. For dancing there is Al Barkley and his New Yorkers.

A romantic song and dance entertainment of the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers type is provided at the Blue room of the Shoreham this week by Elizabeth Houston and Dan Harden. No wonder they have such a record of successful performances at the Rainbow Grill and Rockefeller Center. They have talent and personality.

For those who appreciate fine acrobatics and perfect training, there are Bartell and Hurst, known as the world's foremost adagio artists.

Lest you forget: The Anchor room at the Annapolis Hotel continues to feature the popular radio singer and accordionist, Ward Du Val. Brinkley's boast never a cover or minimum charge at any time. The Rainbow room at the Hamilton features the sweet music of Milt Davis and his orchestra.

Crime Detection Work Outlined to Patent Law Group

The American Patent Law Association, at its dinner at the Raleigh Hotel last night, entertained judges of local Federal courts and members of the Senate and House patent committees. Frederick Hitz, administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, spoke on "Scientific Crime Detection."

About 300 attended the dinner, at which J. Bailey Brown, president of the association, was toastmaster. Watts T. Estabrook was chairman.

In his talk, illustrated by motion pictures of G men's activities, Hitz outlined the development of scientific detection since 1924, when the Department of Justice inaugurated its fingerprinting program.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Advise Married Daughter, Who Says Job Depends on Tolerating Boss' Advances, Mother Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter is a young married woman who has no children and who is working for a man in a private office. She has come to me several times in regard to her problem, and I should like to have the right advice to give her. It seems that her employer, although a married man, prefers a girl in his office who will make love to him and go out on parties with him. This I gather from my daughter's talk. She has told me that from time to time she takes a sociable drink with him and also smokes a cigarette with him when in the office alone, but, from what I understand, he expects more to follow.

My daughter is puzzled as to whether to discontinue the sociable drinking and smoking altogether, and risk being discharged, or handle the situation to the best of her ability, as she cannot afford to give up her position under her present financial circumstances. I know my daughter has a high regard for decency and is very well thought of in her community.

* * * *

I know that her drinking and smoking with her employer is only to keep from being regarded, in his eyes, as a "poor sport," and to avoid being discharged until she and her husband are better situated. Her husband, I think, knows of the above but he isn't making enough money at present to support her and keep his business going. Therefore, he says and does nothing about it. What advice should I give her?

ANXIOUS MOTHER.

Conduct Unjustified.

DEAR ANXIOUS MOTHER: As a young married woman, your daughter has had sufficient experience at living to know right from wrong in this situation, without seeking her mother's counsel. I think she realizes, on some subconscious level of her mind, at least, that her degage conduct with her employer is not justified; and I think her cautious discussion of the matter with you amounts to an attempt, on her part, to clear her own skirts, so to speak, in case the situation ever becomes a matter of common gossip.

* * * *

I maintain that no self-respecting woman, either married or unmarried, would remain two minutes in the employ of a man who made it one of the requirements of the job that his private secretary had to "make love to him and go out on parties with him." On the other hand, certain thoroughly independent-minded professional women might tarry for a closing-hour chat and cigarette with an employer; and—just possibly, though not frequently, and certainly not in the majority of cases—might join him in a drink in the privacy of his office after hours, without feeling they were committing a cheap offense against themselves and against society. But they certainly wouldn't do it because they thought it was a choice between such informal conduct and losing their jobs. The moment such conduct became—or even savored of being—obligatory, they would be, in the vernacular, "long gone." They would, that is, if they were self-respecting women who knew, beyond the question of a doubt, that they were capable of holding an office job on professional merit alone.

* * * *

Either your daughter secretly enjoys the situation, without caring to admit it, or she is a moral coward or an inefficient workman who feels she must compensate in other terms for what she lacks in technical equipment and proficiency. Perhaps in very eagerness to ingratiate herself with her employer she gave him the wrong impression of herself. Maybe he thinks she welcomes his advances. Or perhaps he knows her financial necessity and figures she hasn't the spunk to stand up for her inalienable moral and social rights. But in any event, she should set him right, tactfully but definitely.

* * * *

She can convey the impression that she respects and admires him; that she enjoys his conversation; is flattered by his personal interest; but that, after all, he is married and so is she; and that she would be failing in real loyalty to him, as an employe, if she encouraged the development of a situation that is bound, eventually, to react to his discredit (not to mention hers, of course). If she is an efficient secretary or assistant, she can make herself indispensable to him—supposing he possesses any decency or logic whatever—without compromising herself in any way. And she can, at the same time, maintain an agreeable and easy distance between them. If he isn't the sort of man who can be made to see reason, then she should resign.

M. H.

Young Man's Dilemma.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 21 years old and engaged to a girl aged 22. Until two weeks ago I was steadily employed but am now without a job and have been unsuccessful in finding anything to do. Now, here is my problem: Should I break the engagement and take the ring back? (We were to have been married this month.) I know the girl won't break the engagement, because she has said so. She has said she will wait until I find another job. But do you think it is right to let the engagement drift on, when it might be several months before I get back on my feet? Sincerely,

P. B.

DEAR P. B.: The fact that you consider breaking the engagement and taking back the ring (an ungallant item of forethought, to say the least) suggests to me that the loss of your job may have been an answer to subconscious prayer and possibly subconscious maneuvering. Maybe you were desperately intent, without quite realizing it, on not getting married "this month," or at any time, to the girl you are currently engaged to. Maybe the only last-minute way out was to lose your job. Phychologists tell us that lost jobs and accidents to workmen often trace directly back to the unconscious wish to be rid of the job or the social responsibility that goes with holding the job.

* * * *

The average young man, genuinely in love, wouldn't be greatly appalled or distressed at the idea of letting his engagement "drift on . . . for several months," if his fiancee was willing to wait. He would be only too pleased by the latter's sweet reasonableness. Under the circumstances, since it appears you don't want to get married, and since you are rather young for that enormous responsibility, I think this engagement should be broken. But I think you should be absolutely honest with the girl in the matter. Tell her you just don't want to get married; that it was all a mistake; and give her the privilege of breaking things off. If she won't avail herself of the opportunity for saving her face in the community, then I suppose you'll just have to do it. It isn't a becoming gesture for a man to make; but it's better than his getting married when he definitely doesn't want to.

Shoe Wardrobe.

Two pairs of oxfords with moderately low built-up heels are the minimum requirement for the average day-in, day-out wear, according to an orthopedic specialist.

"Shoe fitness," he said, "depends on shoes that are properly fitted to the foot and to the occasion, and fitness is largely a question of the correct size shoe and the right kind of heel."

Sophisticated Black for Midseason

BLACK acele acetate rayon fashions the frock, above, with sculptured bodice and pleated swing skirt, accented by a wide black lacquered belt. The black hat with cellophane trim, designed by Louisesanders; bag by David Lewis is of lacquered fabric matching belt. A chic and sophisticated ensemble for midseason and on into spring. Note effective merging of shiny and dull materials.

Uses of Sea Food May Win a Prize In Recipe Contest

THE POST recipe contest this week invites recipes for using sea food such as lobster, shrimp and scallops. These are the often neglected sea foods, but their ease of preparation and delicious taste should bring them into more common use.

Perhaps you have a recipe for preparing shrimp and shrimp cocktail sauce or a new shrimp canape or hors d'oeuvres recipe that you think particularly good. Or a shrimp creole dish that has all of the flavor and spice of New Orleans. Perhaps your favorite Sunday night supper dish is shrimp scalloped with egg or a smooth shrimp dish made with cheese sauce. Or you may have learned the art of quickly preparing a lobster a la Newburg. Or on a vacation in New England, learned the art of preparing and serving broiled lobster. Or have a new recipe for using scallops that make this Friday special a real treat.

There are scores of ways of using these sea foods that other housewives would like hear about. If you have mastered the preparation of some special dish that your family enjoys tremendously, send in your recipe. Your recipe may win a cash award. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Swing-Skirted Black Frocks Enliven the Winter Wardrobe

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

RIVALING THE GAY prints, color-drenched crepes and sheer wools which have been exploited as the last word in mid-season tonics to enliven the dark winter wardrobe, is the all-black frock. The majority of black versions which have just arrived in the Washington stores are made with the popular full swing skirt, either pleated or gathered, and topped by a sculptured bodice. Necklines are varied, ranging from the low V type to simple round affairs, and those finished with tiny tailored collars. Practically all of them, however, flaunt a wide patent leather belt with lacings of self-material decorating the front.

The all-black frock is an interesting and sophisticated change from more colorful versions and accented with black hat, coat, gloves, bag and shoes, is an excellent foil for the massive looking gold or silver costume jewelry now in vogue. You can select a simple styling and then pile on literally dozens of bracelets, matched with clips, pins or necklaces. For the woman who has an aversion to black without benefit of color, there are very smart frocks either trimmed with white pique or crepe, or adorned with the ever-feminine lingerie touches. Local stores have a grand variety of black and white models. Deep or narrow yokes of lace-trimmed cotton; intricate collars and gilets are outstanding styles. For the all-black frock, or even for the black one with white, it is considered chic now to contrast shiny and dull materials; both for the forck and accessories.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 25.

ONE OF the nicest things about our self-consciously colorful White Russian colony is the fact that it celebrates holidays of its own—and then very generously raises cain on ours of the Western world. Thus New York in costume is assured of a double dose of parties throughout the winter, which certainly makes it ducky for all who dote on such matters.

ALICE HUGHES.

How those Russians like to toss and take part in parties! Why, only the other day a local woman had her husband yanked into court, and told the judge she wanted something done—that the man had been celebrating the Russian Christmas every Saturday night for 12 years! That's the Russian party spirit for you!

Now that the Grand Duchess Marie, the late Tsar's very own cousin, is back to perch on the figurative throne, things hot up even more. The other night the swankiest of the crowd carried on about the New Year according to the Greek calendar at Vince Astor's tony St. Regis Inn—and there, ladies and girls, was a jamboree. The candles and uniforms! The bows, curtsey and kissings of the hand! And all those quaint old customs—such as being forced to down a mighty mug of beer or champagne without removing the mug from the lips or else be called a double-dyed sissy! And all the time the men singing! Oh my!

Most of the local chivalry was on hand. As usual, Prince Serge Obolensky, wearing his prettiest white satin blouse, ran the show. Of course, after tons of caviar and gallons of chain-lightning vodka were consumed, there was an American interlude—the most fantastic of all. A group of the gentry did the "Bigska Appleovitch," among them Mona (Ten Best-Dressed Women) Williams and Mrs. Laura Corrigan—rich and great ladies. Mrs. Vincent Astor confined herself to a spot of waltz and polka. My gracious! If you want a dash of uptown fun, drop in when we Russians celebrate Labor Day, according to the Greek calendar! Or name your own holiday! Just don't miss it, that's all!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, we see a lot of very high-class weddings each annum, but we shan't have one to top that of Silvia Gould (of The Goulds) and Charles Dabney Thomson a few days ago. Those were nuptials! The couple was lovely to look at, with the harp-playing bride wearing white velvet and pearls and the groom wearing pin-striped pants and a pleased smile. Her eight girl friends wore rose velvet and toted mimosa and African daisies. After the honeymoon, they'll live in Cincinnati, and that town's gain is our loss, for the Gould maiden has been our prettiest harp player!

Pet book title for the day, and written by a lady of our village—"From Hoopskirts to Nudity," done by our dressmaker, Carrie A. Hall. It's a review of 50 years of American styles. The title tells the story, broadly speaking, but it hardly fills a book, so Carrie ran up a lot of other words to tack on.

Sad contretemps at our noted Roxy Theater the other day. On the stage was Crooning Art Jarrett, and whom should a hawk-eyed reporter spot in a front row seat but Eleanor Holm Jarrett, his estranged swimming wife, who dumped the apple-cart when she said she hoped to marry State-Producer Billy Rose some day! Well, you can imagine! As soon as the reporter spoke to La Holm, that peppery beauty snapped and rushed out of the theater in a huff 300 feet higher than the Empire State Building! The girl's been at her Brooklyn home trying to regain pounds lost making a Tarzan super-saga . . . We're all confused by Marion Martin, because there are two of her. One is the most beautiful night-club show girl on Broadway, the other is assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee. Luckily, the former is now exhibiting her physical charms in Hollywood, so we're being saved some grievous boners.

Turn Nerves Into Charm

THIS high-geared modern age is getting to be too much for Sheila's sensitive nerves.

Will she be one of the shattered neurotics whose number is rapidly increasing today?

Or will she do an about-face and become one of the successful neurotics — by learning how to direct her high-strung nature into vitality and charm?

Instead of being crushed by modern life, the neurotic who has her imagination, her sensitive reactions under control gets much more out of it than is possible for a placid, plodding person of no nerves.

And it is really simple to do an about-face when you look at yourself and your life frankly.

Perhaps the cause of your tension and irritability may be what the psychiatrists call a love repression. Often this has nothing to do with romance, but refers to some great interest which marriage or a job caused you to drop.

Revive this interest. Find time for it. If it's music, join a music club. If it's books, read though the ceiling falls in. Feed this wellspring of your being and your inner self is soothed, your outer self glows with a new radiance.

Make it a rule to relax—completely alone—one hour a day. Don't wait until you're ready to scream before you let go. Build up the reserve strength to meet your problems with the tact and charm that endears you to all.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Avoid and Overcome Nervous Troubles," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Measles Now Controlled.

Last week we spoke of new studies that have been made in the subject of mumps. This week I find an article in a current medical magazine on control of another infectious disease—measles.

Measles, like mumps, is not nearly as innocent as parents are sometimes inclined to believe. There is a definite death rate, but it is comforting to know that is has been stetdily declining. In Massachusetts ,for instance, in the year 1920, the death rate for measues was 9.1; in 1936 it was 0.8. This has been due probably more to intelligent isolation and quarantine of cases by parents than to any public health measures. There used to be an idea that children should have measles and get it over with, but that is not necessarily true.

The reduction in the incidence of nutritional disoreders and deficiency diseases in chidren, together with improvement in housing conditions, has reduced the number of chronically ill and debilitated children in whom measles found many of its victims. Besides that, it is possible now to protect children in the face of an epidemic with various kinds of sera.

Antitoxins against measles are found in the blood of almost all patients who have recovered from the disease, and intramuscular injections of such blood can be given to those who have had contact with a case of measles and show a considerable reduction in incidence. If given during the incubation period—that is, durng the ten days after contact—it protects against an attack during the first of these five days, and modifies the attack during the second five days, and even in the eruptive stage it may have a diminishing effect on the severity of he disease.

Protection by the use of human immune bodies is of short duration, lasting only a few weeks, and is of particular advantage when used in institutions, or for acutely or chronically ill, debilitated or very young children.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding, "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene", and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU WERE to have a record made of you voice, you probably would not recognize it as your own, for when you talk you do not hear your voice as other people hear it. In talking, certain vibrations are transmitted from the throat to the nerves of the ear so that you hear your voice in two ways. It sounds different to you than to other people.

For this reason, the average person is often unaware of her faults in speaking. It is difficult for you to tell whether your voice is habitually monotonous, shrill or harsh, or whether your speech is too hesitant or too rapid.

Most of us do not have as pleasant speaking voices as we could have, according to Dr. N. L. Hoopengarner, professor of Psychology in Business at New York University. Dr. Hoopengarner is a pioneer in voice training. Twenty years ago he became interested in development of the pleasing speaking voice as a business asset, and time has proved how right he was. Today employers pay particular attention to voices of applicants. In fact, a lovely speaking voice is the primary qualification for certain positions. You can talk yourself right out of a job!

Recordings Detect Flaws.

A few years ago Dr. Hoopengarner introduced the use of the recording machine for the detection of voice flaws. He found that students are cognizant of monotony or shrillness much more quickly when they hear their voices from the record. Now you can drop in at a music store and have your voice recorded. The only objection to this record test is that you recognize only the glaring faults, and you may not know what to do about them. It would pay to go a step further and have your voice recorded under the supervision of a voice instructor, who will advise you how to perfect it.

Instructors find the most prevalent defects in voices are in tone, which may be monotonous, harsh, or shrill; in hesitancy of speech and in talking through the teeth.

Practice reading aloud—and listen!

Recordings Are Best Way of Self-Correction Now Available.

Dr. Hoopengarner says that monotony can often be relieved simply by bringing this fault to the speaker's attention. Knowing the fault exists aids in its correction.

The hesitant speaker usually intersperses his words with funny noises like "uh" and "ah-ah," and the correction is to stop speaking until you know exactly the words you wish to use instead of groping aloud for them. It may also be helpful to talk more slowly.

Raising Voice Is Easy.

The voice may be raised simply by opening the mouth a little wider, and lowered by not opening it quite so wide.

Then there is the question of whether your voice pleases or grates. Often a great deal can be done to make the voice pleasing by being aware that you need to soften the tonal quality.

A good way to improve your voice is to practice reading aloud every day and listening as you read. Dialogue which allows for change of tone is the best practice.

Voice instructors sometimes advise stretching a vowel to improve tone. Repeat the vowel sounds a, e, ah, o, and oo with a rising and falling inflection.

You can, perhaps with only a little effort, make your voice pleasing. Dr. Hoopengarner believes that the largest percentage of our voice defects are due to the fact that no one has ever told us we need to improve our voices.

2 Afternoon 'At Homes' Attract Capital Society

Reception at Hungarian Legation Draws Hundreds; Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith Is Hostess at Colorful Affair in Home.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Two "at homes" yesterday afternoon kept Washington society in a whirl of activity from 4 p. m. to 7. The Hungarian Legation was the scene of a reception that drew hundreds from official, diplomatic and residential circles. The gathering at Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith's home on R street was a smaller, more informal affair, but it also included a sizable number of notables. Many guests were glimpsed at both affairs. They stopped by Mrs. Meredith's first and then went on to the Hungarian Legation.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Around 6 o'clock, sleek limousines were nosing their way up to the door of the legation on Eighteenth street with a regularity that kept William, the doorman, on his toes every minute. The footman who admitted the guests added another colorful note to the party—turned out, as he was, in a trim black uniform resplendent with brass buttons and silver fringe.

Mme. Pelenyi, gowned in a handsome green frock with shoes to match and an orchid on her shoulder, greeted the long line of guests in the second floor drawing room. The Minister mingled with company both there and in the spacious dining room, across the hall, where the tea table was the center of interest. The usual teatime dainties there and chamagne in the drawing room kept the guests moving steadily from one room to the other, until the reception turned out to be one of the few at which there was a chance to chat with everyone you knew.

The lace-covered teatable was centered with a huge bouquet of rubrum lilies, which were flanked by clusters of tall pink tapers in silver holders. Assisting were a number of diplomatic hostesses, including Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, and Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Siamese Minister.

Mrs. Hull Is Popular Guest

Glimpsed in the crowd was Mrs. Cordell Hull, in a hunter's green frock with a matching turban and a silver fox cape. As usual, she was one of the most popular guests there, with just about everyone making it a point to stop and chat with her. Senora de Espil was there; also, Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Miss Mary Patten and Mrs. Jesse Jones, who was accompanied by Mrs. Will P. Hobby, wife of the former Governor of Texas.

Talking first with one group of guests and then another were the two bachelors of the legation staff—Anthony de Balasy and Baron Paul Schell, who poved themselves past masters at diplomacy by chatting with just about everyone.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in a dark blue velvet frock with a hat to match, was there; also Mrs. Edward McCormack, Mrs. George Pettingill, Mr. and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose in a red ensemble; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Alexander V. Dye and Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, the Duchess of Windsor's noted "Aunt Bessie," was the center of a lively group. Mrs. George Barnett, another of the Duchess' relatives, was there; also Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Knight Davies, who arrived with her daughter, Mrs. Millard Tydings; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, in a handsome black ensemble, set off with a peaked, veiled hat, trimmed in rust; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. William E. Borah, who was accompanied by her niece, Miss Joan Lueddemann; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic William Wile, and many more.

Mrs. Meredith Has Informal 'at Home'

Before going to the Hungarian Legation I stopped by Mrs. Meredith's and found the informal gathering there an unusually pleasant one. The hostess wore a becoming black frock trimmed in gold and received in her handsomely furnished drawing room that was soon filled with guests. Many who later put in an appearance at the Hungarian Legation were there first—including Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Davies and Mrs. Tydings, Mrs. McNary, Mrs. Borah and her niece, Mrs. Jones, and Mrs. Hobby, Mrs. Merryman, Mrs. Hitchcock and Mrs. Loose.

Miss Edna Meredith, niece of the hostess, presided at the small tea table drawn up before the fireplace. There were cocktails for those who wanted them; there were the daintiest of sandwiches and cakes for everyone, and for those who preferred coffee to tea, the dining room table was decked out with a silver coffee urn, and still more sandwiches and cakes.

Among those present was Mrs. Meredith's house guest, Mrs. Earl Butler, of Des Moines, Iowa, who wore a black chiffon frock trimmed in silver sequins. Others there included Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial, Mrs. Harrison Wilson Mount, Miss Lelia Peachy, Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, and Mrs. Zuang Teh Ing, wife of the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry H. Hough, and a number of others who came in just as I was leaving.

When Joseph P. Kennedy, new Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, talked to the Women's National Press Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday, a record crowd was there to hear him. Three extra tables had to be set up in the Cabinet Room at the Willard, and although the luncheon and program out-lasted any for the club thus far this season, almost everyone stayed until the last question was asked, the last off-the-record answer given.

To mention but a few of the many guests—there were Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Miss Eunice Willson, daughter of the United States Naval Attache in London; Miss Betty McBride, Mrs. Joseph Himes, Mrs. Gordon Suydam, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward and Murray D. Van Waggoner, brother of Mrs. Esther Van Waggoner Tufty, a member of the club.

Incidentally, some on-the-record table talk before Mr. Kennedy's speech revealed that the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings are planning a trip to Florida for some time next month. They will spend most of the time at Boca Rotan . . . If Mr. Kennedy can wind up his affairs in time, he hopes to get down to Florida for a few days before sailing for his new post. . . . Still on the subject of sunny Florida—Harry Hopkins, who recently went there to recuperate, expects to stay until some time in February.

English Envoy Feted by Peters

The dean of the foreign ministers in Washington, the Swiss Envoy and Mme. Marc Peter, entertained at dinner last evening for the dean of the entire Diplomatic Corps, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador. Lady Lindsay, who has been ill, was unable to attend.

Ranking guests at the dinner were, beside Sir Ronald, the Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco, and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter returned earlier in the week from a stay in New York, where they were honor guests at the annual banquet of the Swiss Society.

Turkish, Chinese Envoys Guests at Spain's Embassy

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios entertained at dinner at the embassy on Sixteenth street last evening.

Ranking guests were the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun, and the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang. Covers were laid for 20.

Senorita Laura de los Rios has issued invitations for an "at home" this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Musician, Wife Visitors in D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Henri Schmidt-Gregor were in Washington for a few days recently on their way to Miami, Fla. from New York City. Mr. Schmidt-Gregor is giving a series of lectures on music at Miami University. Mrs. Schmidt-Gregor was formerly Mrs. Hiram Bingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt-Gregor will come back to Washington the latter part of March for a stay of several weeks when Mr. Schmidt-Gregor will present a series of ten music lectures under auspices of the Junior League of Washington. His similar series on Beethoven and his works was so successful two years ago that he is doing a series of Johannes Brahms and his works this time. The talks will be on Wednesday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock and will be presented at the Phillips Art Gallery.

Aquitania Brings Titled Celebrities Who May Visit D.C.

The Aquitania brings with it today a shipload of titled celebrities from England, some of whom most likely will gypsy down to Washington before they finally sail back again to their homeland

Chief among them are Lord Stanley, son of Lord Derby, and Lady Stanley. Lord Stanley, who fills the important post of Parliamentary Undersecretary of State for India, has been ordered to take a few weeks away from the cares of state; and of all things, he has decided that the United States is the best place on earth for a good rest.

Other titled visitors aboard the Aquitania include Lord Leverhulme, president of the Royal Institute of Public Health; Lady Layton, wife of Sir Edgar Layton; Sir Ernest and Lady Johnson and Sir Frank Nelson.

Many Are Called But One Is Chosen

Underwood & Underwood.

LOOMING larger than any international situation is the pesky problem that confronts all new additions to the Diplomatic Corps and their wives . . . namely, that of finding a place here in Washington to hang up curtains and the motto about "Home, Sweet Home." Here is Mme. Oluf Tostrup, wife of the newly appointed First Secretary of the Norwegian Legation, caught just in the midst of phoning all over town in a search for just such a haven. The latest reports are that she has finally selected one . . . at 2432 Thirty-ninth place (for the remainder of the season).

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

ENERGETIC MRS. MAURY MAVERICK, who spent all last winter reading proofs on her husband's biography, is now getting up early these cold, gray mornings to take a business course. Not that she is looking for a job, but has simply decided that every woman ought to learn how to type and do shorthand.

Mrs. Maverick is a pretty, attractive woman, and back home in San Antonio, was a member of the Junior League. But in Washington she takes little part in the activities of the Capital's so-called smart set.

On Sunday Representative and Mrs. Maverick will give a tea for their niece, Miss Mary Adams Maverick, and her flying fiance, John Lambie. He crossed the Atlantic last spring with Dick Merrill and is now pilot for an airline. Miss Maverick's two younger sisters hope to fly up from Texas for the wedding February 2.

• • • •

GUESTS ON SUNDAY will be limited to San Antonians now in Washington. The Mavericks are combining this party for the niece with the affair they give every year for constituents from San Antonio, which is the Representative's District.

NOTE: Florence Kelley, whom District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has just made his new legal aide, is a cousin of the Mavericks. A pretty, attractive blonde, she finished Smith College in 1934 and was graduated last June from Yale Law School. Her father is counsel for Chrysler . . . Daniel McCook, who was also recently named aide to Dewey, is the son of New York Supreme Court Justice Phillip McCook, and a nephew of Mrs. McCook Knox, of Washington.

SEVERAL PEOPLE who are almost never lured outside between the hours of 5 and 7 attended the cocktail party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken. Mrs. James F. Curtis and both Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose were among the guests, and their appearance at such affairs is so rare as to be news.

Mrs. Curtis looked very smart in a black outfit with a string of pearls and a small black hat with a feather. She sat comfortably on a sofa during most of the afternoon with Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who has broken away from the epidemic of black and now wears a bright red hat with her frocks. Senator Vandenberg came in later.

Everybody was busy saying good-by to the John Caswells, who leave tomorrow for a six weeks' trip to Europe. They go first to Bucharest, where they will visit our Minister and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther and Freitas Valle, who was former Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy here and is now Minister to Rumania. They also expect to see Senora de Cardenas, whose husband was formerly Spanish Ambassador to Washington. A trip to Vienna and Italy will be included in their itinerary.

MRS. CARROLL MORGAN was accompanied yesterday by her attractive sister, Mrs. Streeter Flynn, who is visiting her until the first of next month. Then she will go to Westover School, where her daughter is studying, before returning to her home in Oklahoma City.

Others at the party were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in a black frock with white accents (Mrs. Marshall Exnicios had chosen the same color scheme); Benjamin Plunket and Philip Broadmead, of the British Embassy; Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, recently returned from a trip by air to Mexico; Tinsley Garnett, Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, the latter in a plaid wool frock with a mink coat; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt; Mrs. Harry Baxter, Ralph Bates and Capt. Hamilton Bryan from the Navy, and Walter White, who came alone as Mrs. White is in New York for a few days.

The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg; Mrs. James L. Houghteling, wife of the Immigration Commissioner; Mrs. William Cushman, in a blue velvet frock; Morris Clark—Mrs. Clark is ill—Mrs. George T. Pettingill and dozens of others were at the MacCracken's yesterday.

Lois Irene Wheeler Is Bride Tomorow

Miss Lois Irene Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Wheeler, of Takoma Park, Md., whose marriage to Oliver Kay Wilson, son of Mrs. Harriet Wilson and the late James K. P. Wilson, will take place tomorrow, has selected her home on Chaney Drive as the scene of the ceremony. The Rev. Walter P. Elliott will officiate.

Miss Dorothy Hall will be the maid of honor. Donald Bauer will be best man. David Wilson, brother of the bridegroom, will be the usher.

Both Miss Wheeler and Mr. Wilson are graduates of Columbia Junior College.

C. F. Warner to Marry Miss Hongell Feb. 26

Miss Teresa Lillian Hongell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hongell, will marry Carlyle Franklin Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Warner, February 26.

The ceremony will take placee in the West Washington Baptist Church in Georgetown.

To Give Cocktail Party.

Miss Evelyn Walker has issued invitations to a cocktail party on Wednesday, February 2, in honor of Miss Graciela Trucco and Fernado Illanes Benitez whose marriage will take place on Februarye 18.

William T. Johnson On Way to Balboa

On his way to Balboa, Canal Zone, William T. Johnson, jr., of Aurora Hills, sailed on the Christobal on Monday. Mrs. Johnson and their granddaughter, Virginia Johnson, accompanied him to New York and are now visiting with Mrs. Johnson's brother-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McMahon.

In Balboa, Mr. Johnson will be guest of his wife's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Alex McGeachey.

Now living in Washington at the Roosevelt Hotel while their children are attending school in Connecticut, the United States Consul at Mukden, Liaoning, Manchuria, and Mrs. William R. Langdon arrived recently in this country.

It will be recalled that Mrs. Langdon was Miss Laura Filer, of Kensington, before her marriage.

Mr. Grosfils to Marry Helen Marie Wilson

Mrs. William Pegram Wilson announces the engagement of her daughter, Helen Marie, to Rene Edmund Grosfils, son of Mrs. and Mrs. Frank S. Hardy, of London, England. Miss Wilson is the daughter of the late Maj. William P. Wilson, Ordnance Department, U. S. A. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Miss Wilson attended Michigan State College and is a member of the Alpha Phi Sorority.

Roosevelt Letter Opens Defense Session Here

Chairman of Women's Conference Reads Message Denying 'Imperial Designs' to Initial Meeting.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

President Roosevelt last night asked aid of the thirteenth Women's Conference on National Defense in making known his national defense policy, "directed solely to the perpetuation of our democratic institutions and ideals and guarantees of our national boundaries."

His letter to the conference was read by Mrs. Gladys Mooney, chairman, at the opening mass meeting, attended by an audience which packed the auditorium of the Mayflower.

James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, who spoke last night, asserted the danger for this country lies in the fact that the people want security with all the advantages that go with it, and at the same time desire individual liberty and freedom of thought and expression.

"In this time of turmoil at home and abroad, women, who are far less hysterical in their outlook than men, and who are able to view the problems that face us coply and logically, should take more interest than they do in foreign and domestic affairs.

"We have in this country a system and a tradition based upon two centuries of furthering an ideal, the ideal of a society which recognizes that at the base of any economic, social or political structure like ours, there must be the individual, and that this individual must possess those individual rights, liberties, and that individual freedom, upon which our whole system rests.

"There are various kinds of liberty. The first has at least been won for this country, and that is religious freedom. Then there is the question of economic liberty and that is where America is at the crossroads.

"If you look at a map of the world today, you will see how completely in many countries liberty of the individuals has been surrendered to the state.

"The problem most difficult of solution for the United States is to provide security, but at the same time safeguard liberty."

Mrs. Gladys Mooney Conference Chairman

Mr. Gerard was introduced by Mrs. Gladys Mooney, past president of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, chairman of the conference. A concert by the United States Army Band and a processional of conference officers and presidents of the participating organizations, opened the program.

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, led the salute to the flag. Col. Alva J. Brasted, U. S. A., offered the invocation and the response to the chairman's welcome was given by Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary. There was also a greeting from Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, permanent honorary chairman of the conference, who organized it 13 years ago.

Scott P. Squyres, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who spoke preceding Mr. Gerard, declared members of his organization, who have seen war and know what battle means, "are believers in preparedness, to the end that the young American manhood of this or future generations shall not be sacrificed needlessly should an emergency arise.

"Every phase of our activities, as a veterans organization, not only seeks to build a better America for Americans but also better Americans for America," he said. "We constantly and consistently emphasize these traditions which should inspire each new generation to a greater appreciation of our blessings as American citizens, and the responsibilities we must accept if the principles of Americanism are to live.

"We feel that we, as veterans, are the logical leaders in the effort to keep America at peace. We are convinced that an adequate national defense is our greatest safeguard for peace. We believe that the safeguarding of American lives is more important than the protection of the American dollar."

Ceremony at Arlington Held in Afternoon

Yesterday afternoon officers and delegates of the conference gathered at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where Mrs. Mooney spoke, pledging, in behalf of patriotic womanhood of America, "our continued allegiance to the ideal of an honorable and lasting peace for which our honored dead have laid down their lives."

A luncheon was held in the Presidential dining room of the Mayflower at noon for presidents of the participating organizations, with Mrs. Laurie Schertle, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, as presiding hostess.

Following the pilgrimage to Arlington, conference officers and delegates were entertained at tea in the east end of the Presidential dining room of the hotel by past national presidents of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary. Mrs. Florence Stark, of Camden, N. J., headed the receiving line. Others receiving with her included Mrs. Mooney, Mrs. Margaret Armstrong, of Pittsburgh, first national president of the organization; Mrs. Winifred Toussaint, of Newark; Mrs. Margaret Oldridge, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Bessie Hanken, of Revere, Mass., and Mrs. Julia Pitcock, of Cleveland.

A reception at which conference officers formed the receiving line was held preceding the meeting last night. These officers were Mrs. Oliphant, as honoary national chairman; Mrs. Mooney, Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Irving Fairweather, of the American War Mothers; Mrs. Elizabeth Kother, of the Woman's Relief Corps; Mrs. Horace B. Blake, of the American Gold Star Mothers; Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, of the Service Star Legion; Mrs. Mary Manning, of the Daughters of Union Veterans, who is acting as secretary, and Mrs. Carroll McGuire, of the American Women's Legion, who is treasurer of the conference.

Today speakers in the morning will be:

Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, directing editor, the Religious News Service; Charles Love Durham, of Cornell University; Kimball Young, of the University of Wisconsin.

The afternoon session is devoted to "Safeguards at Home for an Enduring America," and speakers include Austin H. MacCormick, commissioner of correction, New York City; Robert Fechner, director, Civilian Conservation Corps; Dr. W. F. Draper, United States assistant surgeon general; Brien McMahon, Assistant United States Attorney General; John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, and James Harvey Rogers, of Yale University.

The day's program winds up with a banquet, at which the United States Marine Band will play, and speakers include Raymond Leslie Buell, president Foreign Policy Association; Senator Robert Rice Reynolds, of North Carolina.

Defense Council Waits In Vain for U. S. Band

The music was all up in the air last night at the mass meeting of the Women's National Defense Conference. The U. S. Army Band, scheduled to play, failed to arrive at the appointed hour.

A long line of officers of the various organizations participating stood outside the door of the Mayflower ballroom, color-bearers wearily holding up their banners while everyone who had anything to do with arrangements looked for the band and sought the reason it wasn't there.

Failure of a release from the musicians' union to be received at the adjutant general's office was the explanation given by Mrs. Gladys Mooney, chairman of the conference. She had received one at her office in Detroit, but had, of course, left it there, supposing one had been sent here also. There was nothing to do but commandeer the hotel orchestra and go on with the march.

Mandate Group Plans Campaign For More Names

Two Million New Signers to Be Sought With Speaking Tours.

Two million more signatures, added to the 2,000,000 already affixed to the People's Mandate to End War, is the goal of the People's Mandate Committee, it was announced yesterday at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Avery Coonley. Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the committee, said that the first move in this campaign will be a cross-country motor tour by Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds.

The campaign follows closely on the successful good will trip of the "flying caravan," of which Mrs. Thomas Burke, of this city, was a member, to South America. The Mandate Committee expects to reach its goal by December.

Mrs. C. I. McReynolds leaves tomorrow for San Francisco, and will speak at many cities en route in support of the mandate. Her tour is to be immediately followed by other speakers, including Dr. Mary Wooley, president emeritus of Mount Holyoke College, and Miss Vernon.

Mrs. McReynolds, whose first talk will be in Richmond tomorrow night, says her work will be an effort to strengthen peace machinery in this hemisphere and sentiment against war. She will also support the reciprocal trade agreements on her speaking tour.

The Peoples Mandate calls for a truce in armaments, use of peaceful means to settle conflicts, international agreements to reduce armaments to end economic anarchy that breeds war.

Mrs. Burke, Latin American chairman of the Peoples Mandate, and member of the "Flying Caravan," stressed value of the recent tour of Latin American Republics, saying "I am convinced that the People's Mandate is the most realistic and practical vehicle for peace. It has won admiration and respect of governments and peoples of the western hemisphere."

Another speaker yesterday afternoon was Mrs. Gaeta Wold Boyer, who traveled in advance of the "Flying Caravan" last fall. She told the meeting yesterday she was greatly encouraged by the interest shown by thousands of Latin American women and by their eagerness for co-operation with women of the United States for peace.

Closing the meeting Mrs. Elizabeth Stradley Howell, assistant to the director of the mandate, reviewed main points of work being done by the Mandate Committee, including national broadcasts, delegations to the President and to the State Department.

Among others taking part in yesterday's meeting were Senora de Castilla Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic; Senora de Vitieri, wife of the president of the Ecuadorean delegation of the Peru-Ecuador Boundary Commission; Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy; Representative Caroline O'Day, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. Louis Jay Heath, Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs, Miss Edith J. Wallace Tells Iowans Love Of Home Aids Love of Nation

Agriculture Chief Cites Virtue of Identity With One Locality, Speaking as Guest at Dinner of State Society.

There is virtue in a feeling of identity with a particular spot and too little of such attachment to one's home locality nowadays, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace told fellow Iowans last night. He spoke at the banquet of the Iowa State Society at the Shoreham Hotel, at which he and Mrs. Wallace were guests of honor. More than 200 members were present.

"The feeling of identity with a particular place and the love of it is not sufficiently strong in the United States today," said Secretary Wallace. "Appreciation of one section is requisite as a basis for appreciation of the country as a whole. Since the World War, too many Iowans have lost their farms or have had the desire to sell them and go to California—or come to Washington. I hope many of you will return to Iowa.

"Situated in the center of the United States with the richest soil in the Nation, the lowest percentage of illiteracy and the smallest number of unemployed, Iowa offers an ideal place for building a balanced appreciation of the function of capital, the sacredness of democracy and the reality of religion."

In addition to the guests of honor and the society's president, Senator Guy Gillette, those at the speakers' table included: Senator Clyde Herring, Representative and Mrs. Fred Gilchrist, Mrs. Fred Biermann, wife of Representative Biermann, who was unable to be present; Representative and Mrs. Vincent Harrington, Representative Will Jacobsen and his mother, Mrs. B. M. Jacobsen; the Rev. Maurice Sheehy, of Catholic University, a former Iowan, who offered the invocation; Lorena Albert, of Moravia, Ia., who was the vocal soloist of the evening, and Catherine Thacker, of Washington; her accompanist.

Among other guests were Julian Friant, special assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, and his sister, Miss Regina Friant, who is here from Ames for a visit; Claude Porter, Interstate Commerce Commissioner; Miss Dorothy Houghton, Mrs. Emil Schram, Edward Birmingham, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who is here from Des Moines; Mrs. James LeCron, wife of an assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture; Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Reynoldson, Mrs. William Theophilus, Miss Gertrude Lewis, secretary of the society; Cliff Woodward, Gerald Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Albert, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilson, Don Ried, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Chase and Gen. Charles H. Grahl.

Mrs. Maurice L. Northrup, Iowa State president of the American Legion Auxiliary, also was among the guests as were Col. and Mrs. E. C. Johnson, Col. and Mrs. J. A. Greer and Dr. Thone, of the Academy of National Science.

1938 Visioned As Peace Year By Noted Editor

Chevy Chase Club Told War Clouds Have Silver Lining.

A silver linging was disclosed in the clouds of war on the international horizon by Dr. Max Clauss, editor of Dienstaus Deutchland, who talked yesterday before the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. He was presented on the program by Mrs. Edgar F. Fowler, chairman of the international relations section of the club. He has spent the last two years in England and came to this country just two weeks ago on a speaking tour.

"Viewed from the European as well as from the American standpoint, 1938 is a year of peace," said Dr. Clauss. "The conflict in the Far East remains a serious question, but although this question is of enormous importance to America, the fact that peace in Europe today is unquestionably on a more secure footing than it has been during the past few years, is of equal importance. The civil war on the Spanish peninsula has not spread to a general conflagration. The influence of Soviet Russia in western Europe, which reached its height three years ago with the conclusion of the Franco-Czechish-Russian pact, is now perceptibly weakened."

The three largest states in eastern Europe, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia, do not wish to have their friendship with France interpreted as an attitude of hostility toward Germany or Italy, he said, although they are unanimous in shutting the doors of Europe against Soviet Russia. Czechoslovakia does not today, as was the case two years ago, consider itself in danger of being attacked by a German army. It has come to be generally recognized, and especially in England, that a better treatment of Czechish citizens of German origin is a very important internal problem for that state.

Turning to a discussion of the entente between France and England on the one hand, and the Berlin-Rome axis on the other, Dr. Clauss asserted: "These four countries must reckon with one another whenever a European problem arises and whether they like it or not, they must be unitedly responsible for the peace of Europe. It is, therefore, particularly important to understand that the two international friendships are not military alliances and that they do not constitute two hostile fronts. On the 28th of September the axis Berlin-Rome was given its formal confirmation when Mussolini came to Berlin and, together with Hitler, addressed an open-air mass meeting, which was attended by 2,000,000 people. On that occasion these two men, Germany's Fuehrer and Italy's Duce, openly declared that they wished to live in peace with their neighbors."

Among those in the audience yesterday were Mrs. Joseph Maguire, president of the club; Mrs. Earl Clapp, Mrs. Victor Whitlock, Mrs. George W. Stone, Mrs. Wright Clark and Mrs. Elmont Hazard, members of the committee of the section.

Great Britain Digs in to Defend Hongkong

Wide World Photos.

1 The progress of Japanese troops across the vast area that is China stirs apprehension in Hongkong, a British colony near Canton. But Britain is well prepared to defend her property and citizens if a show of arms is necessary. Modern antiaircraft guns flank the harbor (above), where thousands of tons of shipping come annually to the key port. Laborers are working 24 hours a day on a $40,000,000 defense program.

2 Additional defense measures are trenches located near the frontier of British leased territory on the Chinese mainland. Feverish activity is shown by soldiers of the Rajputana Rifles, native Indians, who are digging trenches.

3 Even civilians in the valuable crown colony are being trained for any emergency, and are shown receiving instructions on machine gun operation. The colony is within the danger zone of any large scale sea offensive which Japan might contemplate. Railroads in the Canton area were bombed yesterday by Japanese planes, and a Japanese warship shelled a small village near British wafers.

POT SHOTS AT HOT SHOTS: Some wary observers in Washington think the most dangerous group in the Capital is the Jacobins, the three-minute statemen with almost a monopoly on self-righteousness, and virtue, and a lurid holier-than-thou complex, the ones who know exactly how many angels can dance on the point of a needle. This virtue complex comes from a genuine virginity of ideas, an ideological adolescence; most of them have not reached the age of political puberty.

Their chief symptom is a deep sulky suspiciousness of anyone who disagrees with them.

Traffic Court Flaws Cited By Freeman

Bishop Points Out Link Between Crime and Motor Problems.

Capt. Whitehurst Explains Street Widening Program.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, last night condemned "inadequate administration" of District Traffic Court in an address before the advisory committee of the American Automobile Association at the Willard Hotel.

Citing a court experience of his chauffeur, Bishop Freeman said:

"I found conditions in Police Court that are wholly inadequate to the usual high standards of our community."

Traffic, Crime Linked.

The traffic problems in Washington, said Bishop Freeman, are "extremely serious." Pointing out that Attorney General Homer Cummings described local crime conditions as a "national disgrace" in a recent talk before the Washington Criminal Justice Association, he continued:

"There is a reasonable relationship between crime and traffic in Washington. Traffic, like crime, is destroying human lives. I agree with the Attorney General—Washington should be a model for all cities. Our traffic regulation should be the best in the country."

The District is not up to date in the administration of traffic laws and traffic control, said Bishop Freeman, adding that he heartily indorsed the proposed five-year street improvement program of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Seven Objectives Listed.

Capt. Whitehurst followed Bishop Freeman and outlined his street-widening and construction policy.

The A. A. A. advisory committee struck at the reported diversion of motor vehicle taxes to nonhighway purposes and urged a new system whereby all motor revenue would be used directly to aid traffic conditions.

The committee outlined seven specific objectives toward the elimination of hazardous motoring problems::

Indorsement of Capt. Whitehurst's highway program; opposition to the diversion of motor vehicle taxes; indorsement of District participation in Federal aid apportionments; a program of pedestrian protection and control; a comprehensive survey of traffic in Washington; strengthening of enforcement personnel and establishment of a separate traffic court.

Taxi Reduction Urged.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, lauded the A. A. A. for its interest in local traffic problems and pledged support of his committee in matters of safety and motor vehicle taxes.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, urged the city to eliminate "95 per cent of the taxis, 95 per cent of the reserved parking spaces in front of small hotels and 95 per cent of downtown loading zones."

"Then," he said, "we may have more efficient regulation of traffic."

Other guests at the banquet included Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent; Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, and various members of the House and Senate District committees.

The first of 440 families will move into their new homes at Brentwood Village, private housing development at Brentwood road and Rhode Island avenue northeast, this afternoon, it was announced yesterday. By next week 300 families will be settled, and the remainder will move in before May.

About 1,600 families applied for residence in the village. The three-room apartments, which were in the greatestdemand, all have been reserved. Only vacancies now are among the larger apartments, consisting of two bedrooms and rining room.

False 'Philosophy of Getting' Blamed for Youthful Crime

Educator Tells Clinic Dictatorship Is Next Unless Some People's Desire for Profit Is Curbed; Hits Some Bedtime Stories.

Blaming a false philosophy of getting rather than living for the "most lawless cross section of young children of any country in the world," Jay B. Nash, professor of education at New York University, last night declared "America far from a pure democracy."

"We must curb some people's desire for profit or the next step will be dictatorship or utter lawlessness," Nash told a large audience attending the weekly Crime Clinic, sponsored by the Institute of Criminal Science, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Expressing approval of censorship of movies, radio programs and pulp magazines, Nash declared definite standards should be established for these activities, "below which any profit-making individual or company might go."

Referring to radio broadcasts of most bedtime stories as sources of juvenile delinquency, the speaker cited cases where children experienced unpleasant dreams and nightmares after listening to the programs, and often entered upon a career of crime, "re-enacting some radio program theme."

Blaming Benjamin Franklins philosophy of getting rather than living for "a good part of the development in America of a false meaning of the word freedom," Nash asserted "Americans don't mind stepping on their neighbors toes if it means personal and material gain for them."

"My conception of liberty," he said, "is the right to swing my arm as far as my neighbor's nose."

A social security system, insuring every individual a comfortable old age, was advocated by Nash as a solution to the constant money getting—regardless of method—idea in America."

Striking at motion pictures as the cause of a great amount of juvenile crime, the speaker declared less than 10 per cent of financially successful pictures possessed themes comparable to the mentality of a 12-year-old child.

Asserting that under American democracy, certain of the individual's rights were relinquished to conform with the wishes of the majority, Nash pictured a truer democracy under a system combining the better qualities of European totalitaranism.

Concluding his lecture, Nash made a plea for more recreational facilities in communities to give younger generations something to do at night "besides rob grocery stores as John Dillinger was forced to do."

Participating in the discussion panel following the principal address were Dr. James H. Fox, associate professor of George Washington University; Dr. Henry Brechbill, associate professor of the University of Maryland, and Dr. Boyd Carpenter, professor of Georgetown University.

Two New Bills Plan to Help U. S. Employes

One Provides Compensation for Overtime; 2d Raises Wages.

Two bills aimed at improving the working conditions of minor employes of the Federal Government, especially in the custodial service, were introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia.

One of the measures would provide for compensation for overtime at the rate of one and a half wages or equal time off at the discretion of department heads.

The other bill would raise the pay scale for custodial workers from a present minimum of $600 to $1,200. The other setups would not be so great.

Randolph said he would seek to substitute his pay bill for the Ramspeck measure when hearings start, probably next week, before the House Civil Service Committee.

The overtime bill proposes all Government workers be classified in one of three groups, according to the type of work done.

Office workers, foreign service employes, messengers, and professional workers confined to laboratory would remain on a 7-hour day with a half-day off Saturday, and all time worked in excess would be subject to the extra pay or time off added to the annual leave.

Other workers, including those in the custodial service and professional men in the field, would be on an 8-hour day.

The 8-hour day also would be applicable to employes in penal institutions, hospitals, and the like, but it could be applied as an average over 3-month periods.

The over-time bill would be applicable to District as well as Federal Government employes.

Osteopath Says Pain in Side May Not Be Appendix

A pain in the right side does not necessarily mean appendicitis and thought should be given before the patient is rushed to the operating table, Dr. H. Willard Sterrett, president of the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Association, said last night at the monthly meeting of the Washington Osteopathic Association at the Ambassador Hotel.

He also attacked what he termed abuses of medicine, referring to deaths caused by overdoses of the new drug, sulfanilimide. Had the drug been thoroughly tested before widely advertised as a specific for venereal diseases, the deaths would not have occurred, he said. He bemoaned present lack of laws restricting "ballyhoo" for many drugs and medicines over the radio.

80 Relief Workers Seek to Increase Appropriation for District.

Desperate Plight of Unemployed Told at Y.W.C.A. Meeting.

A method by which Congress might be persuaded to appropriate more money for the relief of needy families in the District was discussed yesterday at a meeting of the family committee of the Council of Social Agencies, in session at the Y. W. C. A.

The "meagerness" of the relief appropriation as it now stands was condemned by about 80 volunteer and professional social workers. They stressed the necessity of getting an increase so that suffering among the city's poor might be avoided through the winter.

200 Families Turned Away.

A special committee visited the Appropriations Committee last week, and left with it a statement on conditions here, Mrs. Harry S. Bernton reported.

Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare, said approximately 200 families are being turned away by her group. The Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities, asserted that from 40 to 50 Catholic families are applying to his agency every day, and an almost equal number of applications come from Protestant families. William H. Savin, director of the Family Service Association, said.

Chest Plea Denied.

The privately supported family welfare agencies asked the Community Chest for an addition of $140,000 for relief this year, but when the Chest did not raise its goal this request had to be refused.

Miss Beatrice Mullins of Georgetown Hospital told the group that a desperate social worker had sent a man to the hospital for food last week when his WPA pay check had been delayed. As the hospital obviously had no relief funds, Miss Mullins tried all over the city to get help for this man's family, but found the only thing that could be done was to place the children in a receiving home, send the man to the Municipal Lodge and the woman to the Salvation Army's emergency shelter for women.

Night Club Balked By Mount Rainier

Mount Rainier's council and Mayor Norman Pruitt offered a double denial last night that the nearby Maryland community, which heretofore successfully has prohibited liquor sales, soon would have a night club with wine and song and, perhaps, a floor show.

First the mayor and council, meeting in extraordinary session, framed a protest to the Board of Liquor Commissioners at Upper Marlboro against the issuance of a night club license in Mount Rainier.

Then they approved an ordinance prohibiting sale of liquor in any Mount Rainier building containing a pool hall or bowling alley. Offenders would be subject to fines of $50 for each day of violation with a 30-day jail sentence for failure to pay.

Max Forkish, of Mount Rainier, has applied to the liquor board for a license and town gossip had it that a night club shortly would be established in a building in the 3200 block of Rhode Island avenue.

Veterans' Widows Pensions Urged

Representative Lawrence A. Connery, of Massachusetts, last night urged passage of a pension bill for widows and orphans of war veterans, in a joint meeting of District veteran organizations at 1015 L street northwest.

With Oscar Hollingsworth, past District commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Connery urged closer co-operation between the veterans' groups. He called for support for the four-point program of the V. F. W., including the pension bill, national defense, and the provision of either jobs or pensions for veterans.

Bardic Revival for America Is Forecast by Dr. Auslander

Library of Congress Expert Declares People More Sensitive to Poetry.

Dr. Joseph Auslander last night envisioned for America something that sounded like a bardic revival.

It was the first time that Dr. Auslander, who occupies the new chair of poetry at the Library of Congress, discussed his job and what he hopes to accomplish in it. The goal he is aiming toward, he said, is "the restoration of poetry as the natural language of the people."

What American poets need most of all, observed Dr. Auslander, is confidence in their own voices.

"Too long poetry has been the Cinderella of the arts, sitting among the ashes and forced to be content with an occasional crumb from the table."

But, as was the case with Cinderella herself, there may be a great change coming. Americans, declared Dr. Auslander, are vastly more sensitive to poetry than they were only five years ago. The change, when it comes, will be no mere renaissance "in the sense that we say Emerson and his group of Brahmins produced a renaissance, or that Amy Lowell and her group were a renaissance," but a great outburst of song comparable to that of Elizabethan England.

Herein, he suggested, may lie the way of salvation. "There have been times in the past," said Dr. Auslander, "when dreamers have found answers to the questions that practical men were unable to solve. At their extremes the world of song and the world of science meet and coalesce."

Some such thought as this, Dr. Auslander believed, might well have been in the mind of the anonymous individual who has endowed the chair.

Dr. Auslander's title as occupant of the chair is "consultant in poetry in the English tongue." The word "consultant" has led to a misapprehenstion that Dr. Auslander is eager to dispel, namely, that one of his functions is to arrange for publication of the scores of manuscripts that are being sent to him daily.

The new and "nobly proportioned" poetry room in the library annex is now nearing completion. It is in this room that Dr. Auslander plans to assemble, both out of the library's own vast shelves and by purchases made possible by subsequent gifts, manuscripts and first edition of all important poets of the language, including some now living. A fine start at this collection already has been made in the discovery of some of Walt Whitman's notebooks.

Mrs. King, who resides at 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, will receive approximately $75,000. Of that amount, $50,000 is in stock of the King's Department Store, and $25,000 is in other securities. Mrs. King was named executrix. Mr. King died January 7.

A resolution urging Congress to provide immediately for the addition of 135 policemen to the force was adopted last night by the Southeast Citizens Associaion, in session in the Fifth Precinct stationhouse.

At the same time, the association commended Maj. Ernest W. Brown and his men for their fight against recurrent crime waves here. The association went on record as opposing the using of the old Tuberculosis Hospital as a hospital at all.

Modest Shrine For Jefferson Being Studied

Change of Site to Save Cherry Trees Also Considered.

Designs for a considerably more modest Thomas Jefferson memorial than the $3,000,000 marble palace designed by the late John Russell Pope, and a change in location to save the Tidal Basin's cherry trees, were considered at a closed session of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission yesterday.

The meeting was the first since early last year, when a storm of protest arose in Congress against the plan of the commission to place the memorial on the Tidal Basin and obliterate the famed cherry trees.

The meeting was scheduled after President Roosevelt called members of the House to the White House and discussed the dormant Jefferson memorial.

It is understood that the President suggested that a suitable memorial might be erected at a substantially lower cost than the $3,000,000 authorized in the commission's organic act.

Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York, chairman of the commission, himself is understood to have proposed at yesterday's meeting that the site of the memorial be moved off the Tidal Basin and lower Fourteenth street as it approaches Highway Bridge.

This change in location, Boylan told the commission, would save the cherry trees as none of those along the fringe of the Tidal Basin would have to be removed.

Boylan is understood to be less agreeable, however, to the President's suggestion for a sharp modification in the memorial itself.

Boylan issued a brief statement following the meeting and declined to amplify it. The statement read:

"The commission had a discussion on a modification of our program for a Jefferson memorial. We discussed this with representatives of the Fine Arts Commission and National Capital Park and Planning Commission with whom we expect to have further conferences.

"Until we meet again and confer further it would not be proper to forecast our conclusions."

Study Shows Pepco Rate Cut Prospect

Testimony at Hearing Indicates Income Will Allow Reduction.

Utility's Head Opposes Changing Base of Fair Return.

Prospects of a $760,000 slash in power rates for the District became stronger yesterday when Pepco and District officials testified before the Public Utilities Commission.

The company put in an exhibit by A. G. Neal, vice president and controller of Pepco which figured that the amount of rate reduction to consumers this year at the present 6½ per cent basic rate of return would amount to $548,000.

Normal Rate Is 6½ Per Cent.

B. M. Bachman, commission chief accountant, placed before the commission statistics which showed that if there was no change in the amount of the basic rate of return, the amount available for consumer rate reduction would be around $560,000.

The difference between the two amounts of proposed reduction goes back to the handling of the utilities working capital fund which consists fo cash on hand and supplies and materials.

Pepco's present normal rate of return is 6½ per cent. The company is allowed to earn that much on its $70,000,000 rate base before the annual rate reduction can be considered.

Although the Commission has not ordered any slash in the rate of return, on the sliding-scale arrangement, it has been predicted that the rate will be reduced to 6 per cent.

McClellan Gives Views.

Bachman's figures showed that if the basic rate of return were cut from 6½ per cent to 6 per cent it would add approximately $200,000 to the amount available for consumer rate savings, thus making a grand total of $760,000.

Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., took the stand to give his views regarding the rate of return.

"I cannot bring myself to sit here and say that to change the normal rate of return from 6½ per cent would be grossly unfair, but I question the wisdom of it."

Earlier in the day, William McK. Clayton, chairman of the utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, charged that no valuation ever has been made of Pepco property. The rate base originally was arrived at by compromise in a consent decree.

Col. Luther R. Maddox, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, supported Clayton's views.

"Do you want to delay things for a couple of years?" asked Chairman Riley E. Elgen of the P. U. C.

"If it takes that long, yes," replied Maddox.

Whereupon Elgen refused a motion by Maddox to call off the hearings.

Headaches Hit The Hollywood 'Brass Hats'

West Coast Studio Chiefs Have Problems in Wong, Oland and Taylor.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 25.—Hollywood's second Oriental crisis in a week was brewing today at Paramount studios, where Miss Anna May Wong told the head man she'd forsake the movies rather than cut off her hair.

They gave her a week to change her mind. Either she bobs her blue-black tresses or "Dangerous to Know," her latest picture, also will be her last as far as Paramount is concerned.

When that film was completed, the studio offered her a new contract at better than $1,000 a week to do three more pictures, in which she would appear as an Americanized Oriental girl. One clause said she would have to cut her hair.

"I won't do it," Miss Wong retorted. "I'll keep my hair if I have to go to China to wear it."

She'll stay off the pay roll until she changes her mind. It might even be a good idea for her to see whether there's a job open for a Chinese actress at 20th Century-Fox, where another Oriental impasse has executives biting their finger nails.

"Chan" in Collapse.

For these many years, one of Fox's sure money-makers has been Charlie Chan, the great Chinese detective. The suave Charlie has appeared in 11 pictures, solving murders all over the world.

The latest of the series, "Charlie Chan at the Ringside," hardly had started when Warner Oland, the veteran Swedish actor who gained his greatest fame as the great Chan, walked off the set, apparently in a daze.

Officials found him at home, suffering from a nervous breakdown, caused by ill health and marital difficulties. Fox was forced to pay off the cast and to hope against hope that Oland would recover. Physicians indicated that it may be months before the wily Chan is able to discover who murdered the prize fighter. He may never play the part.

This has left the studio with exhibitors clamoring for more Charlie Chan, and no chance for the present of delivering, because Oland's characterization, the experts fear, cannot be imitated successfully. They have talked of at least one picture entitled "Charlie Chan's Son Carries On." It would star Keye Luke, the genuine Oriental actor, who played Chan's dumb son for so long that he calls Oland "Pop."

A Possible New Team.

"I don't know what they're going to do," young Luke said in accents thoroughly American, "but I surely do hope Pop gets well, and soon. I miss him."

If Pop doesn't and if Miss Wong doesn't cut her hair, then perhaps she could join in a little Hawkshawing for Fox. There never yet has been a Chinese lady detective on the screen, and the idea might click. No charge for it, gentlemen.

Another lesser difficulty at Paramount is Miss Olympe Bradna and how to pronounce her name. She knows how, all right, but nobody else can say it exactly as she likes to hear it. So all hands call her "Wimpy." She doesn't like that, either.

A final Hollywood difficulty, which seems at last to be solved, concerns M. G. M.'s Robert Taylor. He suffered an unmerciful ribbing last summer over his manly beauty, the amount of hair on his chest, and whether it was a thrill to kiss him. It started when he went to England to appear in "A Yank at Oxford," and it became so widespread that the studio was worried seriously over the possibility of the "pretty boy" stories ruining his career.

"Tarzan" Taylor Vindicated.

When the film was finished, Taylor returned to Hollywood, as inconspicuously as possible. He even arrived at the airport here at 3 a. m., and unannounced, so there'd be no lady fans waiting to smear rouge on his face. He went into seclusion, at behest of studio chieftains, to await first showing of his latest picture.

It was previewed the other night and it showed definitely that Taylor has plenty of hair on his chest. He also has it on his legs. In a track suit he almost looks like Tarzan.

The picture is a good one. Taylor is tough—and the brass hats at M. G. M. believe that the controversy over the hairiness of their handsomest actor is at an end.

Students Desert Profs for Cinema

Movie stars on the campus not so long ago played havoc with academic life at the University of California at Los Angeles by causing hundreds of students to stay away from their classes.

It was George Burns, Gracie Allen and Edward Everett Horton who offered a powerful counter attraction to the lectures of the professors. The comedians were filming a location sequence of "College Swing."

So interested were the students and co-eds in the comic's representation of college life that their numbers constituted a problem for Director Raoul Walsh and Producer Lewis E. Gensler.

Campus police were finally called to help handle the crowd of collegians.

Politics Expensive In Films as Well

Being elected to parliament by a movie casting director pays far better than being chosen by the electorate of most countries.

Members of a pseudo Hungarian parliament on Sound Stage 16 at 20th Century-Fox studios rant, rave and stroke their beards with proper solemnity—and all for the sum of $15 a day.

For an additional $10 a day, some of them hurl aspersions on William Powell, who gets himself into a bad political mess in a farce called "The Baroness and the Butler."

Members of the real Hungarian parliament, sitting 6,000 miles away, in Budapest, get roughly $4 a day. All of which may prove that politics does not pay, unless the politician is a member of the Screen Actors Guild.

Max Gordon to Bring Cast of Notables to Capital In Premiere of Dayton Play, 'Save Me the Waltz'

Noted Producer Has Recruited Players From Both Stage and Screen; "Paradise for Three" Stars Frank Morgan for First Time; Gilbert Miller to Attend Claire Opening in Lonsdale Play; About Gayety Management; Notes of the Theater.

WHEN Max Gordon, one of the canniest of the Broadway producers, was in Washington for the premiere of "Spring Thaw," starring Roland Young, he confided to this column, in one of those "backstage" interviews over the air, that he would be bringing another new play to the Capital in February, that it had to do with dictatorships and one thing and another. Prompted, no doubt, by an innate modesty, Mr. Gordon didn't tell the half of it.

BELL.

The new play is one of his most important productions in recent years and will be given its first performance on any stage in the National Theater on Monday night, February 7. The title is "Save Me the Waltz" and the piece was written by that well-known Washington writer, Katharine Dayton, coauthor with George S. Kaufman of Jane Cowl's sprightly hit, "First Lady"—which should have had its premiere in this city, but didn't, a happenstance that Sam H. Harris never yet has been able to explain convincingly.

But it is in the cast that Max Gordon has assembled that primary interest will lie. Mr. Gordon has a bit of a reputation that is founded on the substantial legend of "a typical Max Gordon cast," but in the instant case he seems to have outdone even himself.

Not only has he articled some of the most notable luminaries of the current legitimate stage, but he also has recalled from Hollywood a group of artists who have made names for themselves before the cameras.

Some of these "names" deserve to be singled out. For instance, there is Laura Hope Crews, a distinguished star of the stage, who was one of the first to lend her talents and experience to teaching Hollywood how to speak, when sound came to the screen, and since has appeared in many memorable roles before the cameras and microphones, most recently in Ernst Lubitsch's production of "Angel," starring Marlene Dietrich. Then there are Jane Wyatt, leading woman with Ronald Colman in "Lost Horizon," one of the ten best pictures of the year, and Mady Christians, who has played role after role of importance in the celluloids—not to forget Martha Sleeper, whose activities have been more or less divided between stage and films, but who probably is best remembered as one of the authentic beauties of the screen.

The John Emery in the cast is the able young actor who recently married Tallulah Bankhead and was her leading man in "Anthony and Cleopatra." Brenda Forbes is no less distinguished and the name of Molly Pearson harks back as far as "Bunty Pulls the Strings," the comedy hit of its year on Broadway and later on "the road."

To heap the measure high, "Save Me the Waltz" will be staged by Robert Sinclair, who has "The Women," now in its second year at the Ethel Barrymore Theater in New York, to his credit, and the settings will be by that busy expert in stage decor, Jo Mielziner.

One suspects that Mr. Gordon is a little better than himself again and that this will prove to be one of the outstanding events of the season.

That nebulous source of information sometimes referred to as "the grapevine" is responsible for the hunch that since managerial control of the Gayety Theater was relinquished to Izzy Hirst by Col. James Jeremiah Lake, whose name so long has been inseparably linked with the Ninth street palace of pulchritude, things have not gone too well in all departments of operation of the house. The deft touch of the "old master" seems to be as essential to the success of the Gayety as the presence on the stage of an Ann Corio or a Hindu Wassau. So what one hears is that Jimmy is going to take the property back under his personal wing—if he has not already done so. That will be good news to everybody—with the possible exception of the Chesterfieldian Jimmy. And if I have spoken out of turn, I can tell you who to sue! Or is it "whom?"

Yesterday afternoon at 1:30 two of the Washington drama desks sat in on a preview of Frank Morgan's first individual starring vehicle under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner. If M.-G.-M. doesn't fly any banner, it should. There ought to be some sort of a fluttering emblem to signalize the approach of the comparatively unheralded and unsung pictures that this company sandwiches in between its super-colossals. One of these is "Paradise for Three," yesterday's item of lively interest, that comes to the screen of Loew's Capitol on Friday.

There is a trace of the pattern of "The Bride Wore Red" in the structure of this comedy of mistaken identities, the rich masquerading as the poor and vice versa, but it also possesses an obtrusive integrity that sets it distinctly apart from the usual run-of-the-mine utilization of familiar dramatic and comic devices.

Frank Morgan hasn't been better, ever, than he is in this subject. Florence Rice never has been so good. Henry Hull, "buried" in a part not wholly commensurate with his known abilities as a character actor, gives the thing a lift and the "supporting" cast hardly deserves that quoted diminutive. Reginald Owen, Edna Mae Oliver, Herman Bing, Robert Young and Mary Astor must have had fun making a feature that anyone should have fun in watching.

There ought to be a review of this Alpine frolic coming along in this space on Saturday morning. It may not be worth waiting for, but the picture most decidedly is.

It is my learned cellmate, Mr. Ray C. B. Brown, who reaches across the aisle to say that Robert Weede, popular American barytone of Radio City Music Hall, will make his Washington recital debut on Wednesday evening, February 2, in the Raleigh Hotel ballroom. He will be assisted by Clelia Floravanti, resident mezzo-soprano. Weede's voice has been heard over the air since 1933. Now he is headed for greater fame, having been engaged by the Metropolitan Opera—says Mr. Brown.

There will be a little more than the usual activity at the Washington Airport next week, because of the presentation of the new Lonsdale play, "Once Is Enough," starring Ina Claire, at the National Theater.

The producer of this work is Gilbert Miller, who derives almost as much "kick" from piloting his own plane around the circumambient that ceilings these United States as he does from producing such successful stage pieces as his recent "Tovarich" or the earlier "Victoria Regina."

Some of Mr. Miller's associates insist that he sends plays on tour chiefly to have an excuse for flying from New York to their performance at night and flying back home again afterwards.

Bernard Simon, representing Mr. Miller in this office yesterday, rather more than intimates that Mr. Miller will be on hand Monday night for the metropolitan opening of "Once Is Enough." It will be his first visit since he launched Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," too many months ago.

For the fourth time, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray appear as costars in a motion picture. Their latest joint vehicle is Paramount's "True Confession," opening Friday on the screen at the Earle, with John Barrymore boosting the film's stellar eminence to a triumvirate. Earlier releases in which the Lombard-MacMurray coalition have been seen are "The Princess Comes Across," "Hands Across the Table" and "Swing High, Swing Low." There will be more of this "True Confession" business later, since the number is being previewed by the "crieks" this afternoon at 1:30 in the Warner projection room.

"The New Bantock," if you are interested, will be presented by the Eckington Players on Tuesday evening, February 1, at the Langley Community Center, First and T streets northeast. An unusually long cast under the direction of Pauline E. Oak will appear in the play.

PRINCIPALS IN NEW SCREEN COMEDY.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 25.—Idol chatter: Give any young actress a scene in lingerie and her fan mail will double on release of the picture—that is why Hollywood does it. Eric Blore always sits in a chair as though he were modeling for "The Thinker." Today's ho-hum from the publicity barrage: "Richard Cromwell has for a pet a parrot which can recite Hamlet's Soliloquy in its entirety." I cannot vouch for Leah Ray's acting ability—but she has the most beautiful eyes in all Hollywood. Look alikes—in profile: Anabella and Madeleine Carroll.

DIXIE DUNBAR.

Must be getting blase—I never register excitement any more when the publicity lads report a new romance for Dixie Dunbar. That huge Kodiak brown bear skin which hangs on the saloon wall in "Girl of the Golden West" really belongs to the noted woodsman, J. Barrymore—he bagged its original owner in Alaska. Pat O'Brien's family call him "Bill" instead of "Pat." Unless ankle length skirts return to fashion Carole Lombard would be a cinch to sway the average jury.

• • • •

Amazing how many pigtails are sprouting in Hollywood since Shirley Temple adopted them for her current role. Appropriate names: Milton Cashy is one or Filmville's more successful business managers. Grace Moore's favorite color is pink; there is a dash of it on almost every costume she wears. Tip to Gene Raymond: you would be popular with more male fans if you could steam out that marcel. Most of the theatrical wigs, beards and mustaches are imported from Central Europe.

Never has Hollywood taken up any fad with such wild enthusiasm as it has the current photography craze. Half of our stars wear candid cameras draped around their necks; the other half tote their trusty 16 millimeter movie cameras wherever they go. Most of the biggie stars have obtained studio permission to take their movie cameras on the sets. They photograph the scenes in which they do not appear—and have their secretaries, or their hairdressers, or anyone who is handy, photograph the scenes in which they do appear. Worst of all the camera nuts is Jimmy Stewart. He made a sixteen millimeter version of every scene in his last picture—and photographed it in color. Three days before the studio's production was previewed, every executive on the lot received a formal invitation to attend Stewart's private preview. And they liked several of the ideas he had used in editing his film so well they were adopted for the professional picture.

In the Twentieth Century Cafe today I met Paul McVey, just back from Africa's jungles where he has been playing a leading role in "Stanley and Livingstone." This is his tale of woe: He made the location trip under protest. In Africa, he contracted, first malaria, then jungle fever. Having struggled through his role, he went to London—and there he had to submit to a major operation. But it was only when he arrived in Hollywood that he learned of the prime disaster. He had held the ticket that won a $1,500 prize in a local theater's bank night. His wife heard the number called, but could not collect. Paul had carried the ticket in his billfold—and it was somewhere in Africa.

To Hollywood's extras 1937 will always be the year of the "big boom." Never before, in all Filmtown history, have so many of them worked. Each studio has produced an unusual number of "colossals" requiring mob scenes—"Wells Fargo," "The Buccaneer," "The Road Back," "Conquest," "Gold is Where You Find it," "In Old Chicago," "Ali Baba," "Robin Hood" and at least a dozen others. Official figures recently released by Central Casting show that the average number of extras employed (at an average wage of about $7 per day) during the past year was 993. It is only when you reflect that there are more than 17,000 registered extras that the "Big Boom" becomes irony.

New York, Jan. 25.

". . . Now wait a minute, dear, before you go out. I've got a swell idea for a movie. Maybe we can sell it . . . It's a musical. About a show where the Understudy gets sick on opening-night, and so the Star has to go on . . . Okay, skip it—but come home early."

12 P. M. "We were up in the Wisconsin woods, with Peter Anders, finding the bodies of his victims," J. Edgar Hoover states at the Casa Manana. "The woods were full of deer, moose and bear. But they told us we couldn't shoot at 'em, because we had no Hunting Licenses!" . . . "Yes," adds Clyde Tolson, Hoover's aide, "and the snow-outfits were all ready for us when we arrived. The sizes were perfect—because one of the St. Paul agents played on our ball team in Washington, and so knew our sizes" . . . "So Anders wanted to kidnap me?" Joe Di Maggio sighs at Leon & Eddie's. "All I can say is I'm very lucky" . . . "Take a look at the World Almanac," Charlie MacArthur is told at "21." "It reports the Academy Award you and Ben Hecht won for producing 'The Scoundrel,' with Noel Coward. But the Almanac lists the producers as 'Ben Hecht and Charles MacCarthy.'"

1 A. M. "Ted Newton and his wife, Drina Hill," Elspeth Eric relates at the Tavern, "both were in 'Dead End.' They went looking for acting jobs, and when they returned to their home the nurse told them that a movie agent had phoned. But he wants to sign their three-weeks-old baby to a movie job, at $25 a day" . . . "I just flew up to N. Y. for one day," Jack Kirkland confides. "I came up to see Hails Stoddard, and then back to Georgia." Kirkland exhibits his blinker and a slight bump on his forehead—sole remnants of the Watts slugfest . . . "Sonja Henie won't play the matinee at the Garden show," an agent advises at Le Mirage, "because she's sore at a Garden official" . . . "Jay Allen, the correspondent, was in Teruel," one of his friends reports at the Versailles. "The Fascists began blowing holes in the buildings, with their heavy artillery. The next day Mrs. Allen received a two-word cable from Jay. It read simply 'Teruel draughty.'"

2 A. M. "Mary Kirk Brown was at the Roney pool, watching Big Apple dancers," a Floridian states at the Cocoanut Grove. "She turned to her companion, and said those were the same dancers who entertained at El Morocco Sunday nights—and asked him if he ever had been at that club . The man was Paul Maye—who was slugged by Jimmy Bryant there. He was Grace Moore's escort that night" . . . At the Cotton Club Benny Fields searches under the table for the seven-karat diamond lost by his wife, Blossom Seeley. "Here it is," he shouts, relievedly . . . "When James Sweeney, last of the O'Connell kidnap defendants, is tried in Albany," a reporter tips at Mammy's Chicken Farm, "Sam Leibowitz will be his defense counsel."

3 A. M. "Look at Conde Nast, sitting there with James Roosevelt," a ringsider states at the Onyx. "Next went to see 'Cradle Will Rock,' and in the Pamphlet scene the actor played it straight at him. And so Countess di Frasso, who was with Nast, kept nudging the publisher to applaud throughout the show" . . . At La Conga, Gregory Mangin, the tennis star, becomes conscious-stricken about his chauffeur sitting out front in the cold, sends for him, and has the management serve him champagne . . . "I went to see the I. L. G., W. U.'s revue, 'Pins and Needles,'" Jackie Osterman laments at the Garbo, "and applied for a job as a Cutter. Anything to get back on the stage again" . . . "Well, I'm collaborating on a play with John Colton," James Cannon confides at the Gay 90's. "Colton is the author of 'Rain,' so all I asked for was an advance—and an umbrella."

4 A. M. "The next issue of 'Foto' will show a young girl on skis, in midair, dressed in a bathing suit," a publisher reports at El Gaucho. "In order to save the model from freezing at one of those ski resorts the editors built a special scaffold on the roof of their building here and photographed her there. But she caught cold anyway—standing, in a bathing suit, on a skyscraper scaffold in N. Y." . . . "I don't want to talk about the Leviathan," protests Geoffrey Russel, who is taking that ship back to England, at El Morocco. "I just want to talk about Love" . . . "Virginia Peine, the screen actress," her companion assures at Bill Bertolotti's, "is in town to appear in a play" . . . "I've written a song," Butch Towers, the betting commissioner, reports at Lindy's. "It's called 'I Love Your Broken English.' Santly Joy will publish it, Russ Morgan is doing the arrangement and Bing Crosby will sing it."

5 A. M. "The class struggle has hit the Westminster Kennel show," an official reports at Longchamps. "The smaller exhibitors are squawking because their mutts win at other shows, but not enough at the Garden" . . . "Sure I've invented this new drink-mixer," Fred Waring relates. "But every night club where it's demonstrated wants to use it—on condition that I bring the band for the installation ceremonies" . . . "Joris Ivens, who made 'Spanish Earth,' took the China Clipper last week," a producer states at Dave's. "He's set to make that picture about China's fight for self-preservation" . . . "I would have married Abe Lyman if he agreed for me to stop working," Eleanor Powell confides at Reuben's. "But he wanted me to work. That's why we broke up. But of this I'm sure—I don't know who the man is yet, but I'll be married this year. And then I'm through with movies, the theater and dancing."

6 A. M. . . . "Oh, yes—did you see the nice things Pegler wrote about you? The only other boost he's given was for 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' . . . No, that doesn't mean you're a great guy, dear. It just means you're another dwarf."

Ebsen Pulls Stunt To Keep Sailing

Buddy Ebsen rented a new home so his wife will allow him to keep sailing.

Whenever the actor's not working in "The Girl of the Golden West," he can be found at the Santa Monica harbor, tearing around in his new starboat.

Mrs. Ebsen protested on the grounds that she was worried about him because she was unable to watch him.

So the actor has rented a house on the Pacific Palisades, and now his wife can sit on their front porch and watch her husband as he skims about the harbor.

She's going to rig up some kind of a signal, so she can turn it on when she wants Buddy to come home to dinner.

Zoo Reproduced For Film Drama

A reproduction of New York's Central Park Zoo has been constructed at Major Studio for the current Bing Crosby-Beatrice Lillie picture, "Doctor Rhythm."

Actual plans and photographs of the original were used in the construction.

The film zoo is stocked with about 100 animals, including lions, tigers, chimpanzees, giraffes, a 12-foot python and six seals. An aviary of 80 birds also is to be used.

In the cast are Mary Carlisle, Andy Devine, Louis Armstrong, Laura Hope Crews, Frank Elliott, Rufe Davis, Fred Keating, and Franklin Pangborn. Frank Tuttle is directing.

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball
By Shirley Povich

Griffith Makes Managerial Debut, Driving White Sox to First American League Pennant; McGraw Feud Continues.

Chapter Eleven

THE FAITH IN 32-YEAR-OLD Clark Griffith that prompted Charles Comiskey to appoint him manager of the Chicago White Sox was quickly justified. Griffith blossomed as the first manager to win a pennant in the American League. That was 1901 and it was a masterful job by the maiden manager, who guided the Chicago team to victory after a stubborn, season-long battle with the Boston Red Sox.

In raiding the National League for talent during the previous winter, Griffith had done well for his White Sox, bolstering his team in every position. But, as manager, he did not shirk his own pitching duties. The little right-hander was a potent factor in the pennant triumph aside from the shrewd managerial judgment he displayed.

Griffith literally drove and led the White Sox to the pennant. He took his regular turn on the mound throughout the season and proved not only the team's leading pitcher, but the leading pitcher of the league, winning 24 games against 7 defeats. In that season, Griffith registered the most brilliant pitching record of a mound career that was to extend through 18 years.

The newly organized American League had allotted a franchise to Baltimore and thus it was that the season of 1901 witnessed a resumption of Griffith's feud with John McGraw.

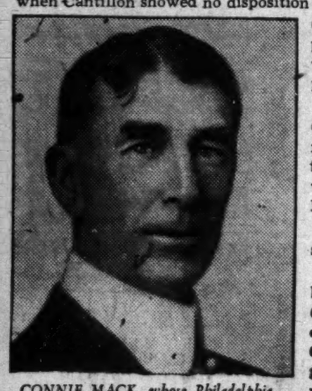
The proverbial enmity of the cobra and the mongoose was a love-feast compared to the Griffith-McGraw bitterness. McGraw prized, above all else, a hit made against Griffith's pitching and Griffith knew no greater joy than striking out McGraw. A pair of firebrands on the diamond, renowned umpire baiters, Griffith and McGraw clashed unfailingly.

Another Big Day in the Griffith-McGraw Feud.

IN AT LEAST ONE INSTANCE, however, Griffith triumphed in a brush with McGraw. But, on that occasion, he was aided and abetted by a league umpire, much to his surprise.

Griffith and his White Sox were battling McGraw's Orioles at Baltimore one July afternoon and it was a typical White Sox-Oriole ballgame. McGraw, from the outset, heaped a torrent of abuse on Umpire Joe Cantillon.

After protesting vigorously at Cantillon's decisions on balls and strikes in his first appearance at bat, McGraw flatly accused the umpire of favoring the Chicago club. Players of both teams were amazed when Cantillon showed no disposition to banish McGraw from the game. Cantillon was an iron-handed umpire who, never before, had hesitated in giving an obstreperous player "the thumb."



CONNIE MACK, whose Philadelphia team won its first American League pennant in 1902.

It was a strange calmness that Cantillon was displaying in the face of the unflattering descriptives flung at him by McGraw who was something of a genius in that line.

But Cantillon's method of reply soon revealed itself.

McGraw, in his third time at bat, whacked a clean single off Griffith's pitching and jogged easily to first base, laughing at Griffith en route. Cantillon, the game's only umpire, moved to a position in back of the pitching mound, as was the umpires' habit when a man reached base.

Griffith, chagrined by the fact that McGraw had made a hit, proceeded to wind up and pitch to the next batter when he heard Cantillon mutter plainly in his ear:

"Go ahead, Griff, pick McGraw off first base."

Given the suggestion by no less a personage than the game's umpire, Griffith was somewhat surprised, but asked no questions. He drew McGraw far off base . . . with an illegal and obvious balk motion . . . and then rifled the ball to his first baseman. McGraw was trapped and tagged. Cantillon waved him out.

McGraw rushed toward Cantillon yelling indignantly: "Balk! Balk! Everybody saw Griffith make a balk!"

Cantillon shook his head somberly in an eloquent denial that there had been a balk and his decision on McGraw stuck.

Connie Mack Wins His First Pennant.

THE NEXT ORIOLE HITTER also reached Griffith for a single. Bethinking himself, Griffith used the same balk motion that had trapped McGraw, and with a quick throw to first trapped the second Oriole off the base.

"Go to second, that was a balk," Cantillon motion the Oriole runner.

Whereupon Griffith protested, pointing out that it was the same motion he had used to trap McGraw. But Cantillon was adamant.

"Listen, young man," Cantillon told Griffith. "You picked McGraw off base as a personal favor to me. If you want to pick anybody off for yourself, you gotta obey the pitching rules."

In 1902, Griffith failed to repeat his pennant triumph with the White Sox. Connie Mack of Philadelphia, had rounded together the first of his great ball teams and led the league from start to finish, winning 83 games and losing 53. It was, by chance, the same record that Chicago had made in winning the 1901 pennant. It was the year of Rube Waddell's debut for Connie Mack, and Waddell and Eddie Plank virtually pitched the Athletics to the championship. Mack also boasted in Outfielder Dave Fultz, the league's leading base stealer. Griffith's Chicago club finished in fourth place.

John McGraw deserted the American League during that 1902 season, after his Orioles had finished fifth in 1901. The Baltimore Club was down in the race and proving an unprofitable venture for McGraw, who had bought out Wilbert Robinson's share of Oriole stock by trading to Robinson his interest in the famed Diamond saloon.

When McGraw enlisted with the New York Giants in July, 1902, taking four of his Oriole stars with him . . . Iron Man McGinnity, Roger Bresnahan, Gilbert and McGann . . . there was evidence that Owner John Brush, of the Giants, was attempting to wreck the American League.

Brush had been a long-time enemy of Ban Johnson and, following the developments at Baltimore, Johnson was determined to retaliate by installing an American League Club in New York to "buck" Brush's Giants.

Ban Johnson and Griffith Move Toward Manhattan.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE had not attempted, in its formative days, to place a club in New York. Manhattan was deemed impregnable, because of the obstacles of obtaining a playing field, sufficient backing and a star team of players able to compete with the Giants for the fans' patronage.

But, convinced that the defection in American League ranks at Baltimore had been inspired by Brush, Johnson was determined to carry the fight to the Giants' owner in New York. The first move would be to gather a team of stars that would command publicity and overshadow the Giants, if possible.

It was natural that Johnson would turn to Clark Griffith for help. Griffith's genuis in raiding the National League for talent had been a potent factor in the early success of the American League and his services were in need again.

Griffith agreed to undertake the job. He had in mind a "raid" on the Pittsburgh Pirates, who were virtually untouched when "The Old

Cadets Face Gonzaga in Tilt Tonight

St. John's Five Favored to Retain Catholic Prep Title.

St. John's crack basketball team exposes its Catholic Prep title to Gonzagas improving representatives tonight at 8 p. m. in Catholic University gymnasium.

The Johnnies, with perhaps their best team in history, have annexed eight games in nine starts, bowing only to the formidable Georgetown University Frosh, and will take the floor a prohibitive choice, judging by the respective records of the teams.

Gonzaga has been inconsistent in compiling a record of five victories and two setbacks against a fair brand of opposition. Coach Orrel Mitchell's smartly coached charges have conquered strong Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Mount Rainier, Georgetown Prep, Washington-Lee and Hyattsville, while dropping encounters to Eastern and Tech.

The only direct comparison by scores of St. John's and Gonzaga is offered through the efforts of each against Bethesda. In an early game Gonzaga downed the Marylanders by 3 points, while last Monday St. John's topped the same team by an equal margin, 24-21.

The battle tonight is the first of two meetings in which the bitter prep rivals will engage this season. Last year the teams opposed in three torrid clashes, with St. John's winning two after losing the opener. The Cadets have captured the championship three years running and four of the players who helped gain these titles will be on hand tonight. They are Jim Giebel, Joe Gallagher, Frank Battiste and John Swagart, who have played together since their sophomore years.

In a preliminary, scheduled to begin at 7:15 o'clock, alumni quintets of Gonzaga and St. John's will oppose.

Starting line-ups for the main contest are expected to be, for St. John's: Giebel, at center; Swagart, and Battiste, at forwards, and Gallagher and Jim Mulvihill at guards; for Gonzaga, Lane O'Donnell at center, Jerry Connolly and Chip Collins at forwards and Joe Heiberger and Phil O'Brien at guards.

Leading scorers to date for Gonzaga have been Collins, Connolly and O'Brien, and for the Cadets Giebel, Swagart and Gallagher, who will probably be the best ball handler on the court. MUNHALL.

Mrs. Walper Wins Match

Beats New Jersey Star in Florida, 2-1.

By the Associated Press.

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 25.—Easily outclassing their opponents, Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., and Patty Berg, Minneapolis, moved today into the second round of the women's winter golf tournament here.

Miss Hemphill, last year's winner, defeated Mrs. Terry Dolson, Fort Myers, 8 and 6, while the Minneapolis red-head found little difficulty eliminating Katherine McCloskey, Pittsburgh, 8 and 7.

Other favorites also swept through their matches despite gale winds which blew over the course all day. The only close matches were those between Mrs. Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. William Hockinjos, Lake Hopatcong, N. J., which Mrs. Walper won 2 and 1, and Marion McDougall's victory over Sarah Guth, Webster Groves, Mo., by the same figure. Miss McDougall is from Portland, Oreg.

Other results:

Louise Garner, Winnetka, Ill., beat Mrs. E. F. Carey, Indianapolis, Ind., 5 and 4.

Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, Palm Beach, eliminated Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, New York City, 6 and 5.

Audrey Phipps, Palm Beach, won from Eloise Briese, Portland, Oreg., 4 and 2.

Imported Referee Here on Saturday

An out-of-town referee will be imported to officiate at the Catholic-Maryland boxing matches Saturday night, athletic officials of the schools decided last night. Two men were proposed, Elder Craft, of Portsmouth, Va., and Capt. John R. Lovell, of Fortress Monroe, Va. Craft already has declined the bid because of a previous engagement at the Naval Academy, but no reply has been received from Capt. Lovell.

Charles Reynolds, of this city, worked the two previous matches, and it is no secret that Maryland was dissatisfied with his efforts. The Terps thought Reynolds wrong in awarding Joe Bunsa, of Catholic University, the decision over Mike Lombardo in the 155-pound class last year. In 1936 they accused him of negligence and inefficiency in handling the light-heavyweight bout between Johnny Gormley, of Maryland, and Fred Rydzewski. The latter knocked out Gormley with a right-hand shot over Reynold's shoulder while he was wiping Gormley's gloves after a knockdown.

Salesman MacPhail Can't Sell Star Pitcher Mungo to Bruins

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Collapse of two conferences within 24 hours has failed to discourage the Chicago Cubs in their efforts to obtain Van Lingle Mungo, speedball pitching ace, from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The second conference between Clarence Rowland, Cubs trader, and Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Dodgers, folded up today with the two clubs no closer to a deal for Mungo than they were last November.

MacPhail departed for St. Louis in an effort to arrange a deal with the Cardinals for the Dodger pitcher. Before he left, however, he promised Rowland he would meet him at the National League midwinter meeting in New York next week.

MacPhail and Rowland conferred last night and after arriving at the usual nowhere, they were apparently all through for the present, but MacPhail remained over for another meeting today.

Asked what players MacPhail expected for Mungo, plus cash, Rowland said:

"We discussed at least a half-dozen combinations. MacPhail thinks he has the most valuable player in the league in Mungo, but we don't think so. Naturally we can't break up a good ball club just to get one man."

Rowland asserted, however, that so long as the Dodgers have Mungo, the Cubs are going to keep after them, sticking to their course of not giving up a whole ball club to land him.

Billy Jurges, the Cubs' shortstop, returned his contract today unsigned. He is classed as a perennial holdout.

Phil K. Wrigley has said: "I don't blame any player for trying to get all he can. We can only pay what we think a player is worth to the club. It's a matter of negotiation; if the club thinks a player draws the fans through the gate he is paid accordingly."

Making his first start in several months, Aneroid (extreme left), J. A. Manfuso's star eligible for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and winner of the Suburban last year, ran only fourth in a 6-furlong test yesterday. Lefty Gomez Heads Large Holdout List Yankee Pitcher Snubs $15,000, an Increase of $1,500.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Jan. 25.—The rapidly growing list of major league salary holdouts today acquired another conspicuous recruit, Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, southpaw ace of the world champion Yankees and No. 1 pitcher of the American League in effectiveness.

At Reno, where he's divorcing his actress wife, June O'Dea, Gomez revealed he had been offered a $15,000 contract, representing an increase of $1,500.

Like most other Yankee contracts, this is considered the club's "opening bid." Gomez, whose pay was cut from $20,000 to $13,500 last year after two mediocre seasons, made a sensational comeback in 1937. He won 21 games, against 11 defeats, and led all pitchers with an earned run average of 2.33 per game. He was the strikeout king of the majors with 194 victims, and topped off his year by beating the Giants twice in the World Series.

Gomez joined two teammates in the holdout class, Joe DiMaggio and George Selkirk, both outfielders. DiMaggio not only turned down a $25,000 offer representing a $10,000 raise, but jolted the Yankee front office by demanding $40,000.

Of last year's holdout crop of Yankees, biggest the club ever had, only Jake Powell is conceded to have his signature on the dotted line. Nothing has yet been heard from Lou Gehrig, top man with $36,000; Red Ruffing, who held out until the season was a month old, or Bill Dickey, backstop, who drew down $18,000.

As a whole, the big 1937 holdout

Connie Mack Spikes Rumor He's Quitting

Cochrane Is Awarded 'Most Courageous Athlete' Honors.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—Connie Mack tonight spiked rumors of his retiring as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics with "I am going to continue on as manager as long as I can."

"There has been a lot of talk about my resigning," he told the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association at its annual banquet, "but I love baseball and I don't want to quit and I'm not going to."

Rumors that the dean of baseball managers would give up the managership and direct the affairs of the club merely as president became current several months ago when Mack was ill.

"I'm feeling much stronger these days and expect to be ready to go to training camp next month," Mack declared.

"I haven't the faintest notion of giving up while there's still a chance to make another try for a championship."

Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, tonight was named the "most courageous athlete of 1937" by the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association.

Before a line-up of notables in the sporting realm and 1,000 guests at the association's banquet the plucky manager and former catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, was given a plaque.

"Here was a man that lay at death's door, but who came back before the season ended to lead his team," said Al Horwits, president of the association, in presenting Cochrane with the award.

Cochrane was seriously injured last summer when he was struck on the head by a fast ball pitched by Bump Hadley, of the New

Riders Take Second Spot In Cage Race

Improved Team Now Looms as Threat; Eastern Again Listless.

By Jack Munhall.

One surprise marked the interhigh double-header at Tech gym yesterday.

The surprise was occasioned as Roosevelt's Riders jumped into second place by whipping Tech, 32-24. Central's five pressed leading Eastern to the limit before dropping a tough 27-24 decision.

By its victory, Eastern moved closer to the title, being undefeated in five contests. Western, which was idle, skidded into third place as the Roosevelt team chalked up its third triumph against one loss.

The Mount Pleasant five, a decided underdog, carried the fight to the Lincoln Parkers and had it arisen an iota above its normal game Eastern would be nursing its first defeat. The Northeast five was still in the throes of a slump which first became apparent in the Western game.

Quantrille Starts Fuss.

Clint Quantrille, Eastern center, started his mates along when he scored the initial basket, but Harry Martin, of Central, flipped in a foul toss and the score rocked back and forth. Eastern led at the end of the first quarter, 5-3, and rallied to hold a 9-8 advantage at half.

Central dashed out in the third quarter and caused a marked rise in the pulse rates of Eastern followers by hopping into the lead on a midcourt "set" shot by Leonard Sokol and another basket by John Fanning. Ralph Matera then counted his only points for Eastern as he took a "blind," over-the-head pass from Russ Lombardy to push in a snowbird. Lee Lusby, individual scoring leader in the series, shoved Eastern to the fore with a free shot and Quantrille ran the count to 14-12, Eastern, with a follow shot.

In the last stanza Central temporarily faltered, and the game flitted beyond its control when Lusby, Quantrille and Lombardy fired in baskets without an enemy retaliation. Sokol, whose lengthy sharpshooting featured the game, sent Central hopes soaring with two field goals, but Lombardy and Lusby led a counter attack which clinched Eastern's victory.

Roosevelt Finishes Strong.

Eastern's big scoring three, Lusby, Quantrille and Lombardy, paced the offensive with 9, 9 and 7 points, respectively.

Sokol and Archie Panago registered 8 and 6 markers, respectively, for the losers.

Roosevelt finished with a rush to trounce Tech. The McKinley lads, showing to better advantage themselves, sneaked out in front, 9-5, in the first quarter, but Roosevelt, sparked by the substitution of Baseball and Mr. Ruth Still Far Apart.

By Shirley Povich.

With no qualms whatsoever, major league baseball is prepared to embark upon a third consecutive season with the magic name of George Herman Ruth still missing from the rolls. Baseball seems to be doing nicely without Babe Ruth and there is no disposition by the club owners to bring him out of retirement.

POVICH.

That seems to be all right with the Babe, too. After his first disappointment at the failure of the big leagues to "take care" of him at the end of his playing days, Ruth is seemingly content to retire to his annuities and his golf clubs and drop into an occasional ball game in a spectator's role.

It's a different tack on Ruth's part. In the early months of his exile, he sourly accused the major leagues of letting him down. To hear the Babe tell it, baseball owed him a job—and a manager's job at that. He pointed out all that he had done for the game and openly expressed surprise that the big leagues would permit him to slip off the rosters without a token of appreciation in the form of a managerial berth.

There were big league jobs open he knew. There was a job in Washington after Clark Griffith sold Joe Cronin to the Red Sox, and the Cleveland folks were casting about for a new manager after Steve O'Neill was let out. There was an opening at Cincinnati when Charley Dressen got the heave-ho, and last fall at St. Louis there was a vacancy with the Browns.

• • • •

Of course, the Babe didn't stop to reason that big league baseball, especially in the person of Col. Jake Ruppert, had been expressing its appreciation very generously throughout his playing career. I don't know what he calls a three-year contract at $35,000, a three-year contract at $52,500, a one-year contract at $70,000 and a one-year contract at $80,000, but I'm inclined to call it appreciation of the first water.

• • • •

When the Babe was hitting home runs in his peak years he was, comparatively, the only big leaguer who was performing that stunt. I mean he was so far ahead of the other sluggers that he stood alone at the art. But before he was out of baseball, the home run became commonplace. Other strong-backed individuals started swinging from their heels and the Ruthian homer was rivaled in several quarters.

• • • •

Jimmy Foxx and Lou Gehrig came along as a pair to press the Babe for honors and finally outstrip him, and the fact is that baseball today is enjoying a far more frenzied home-run display than ever marked the game in Ruth's heyday. Ruth didn't take the home run with him when he left baseball. Last August, Rudy York, of the Tigers, went on a homer-hitting binge and socked 18 during the month to surpass any one-month record that Ruth ever achieved.

• • • •

With Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio and George Selkirk on the rolls, the Yankees aren't lacking for homers despite Ruth's absence. Young DiMaggio collected 46 for himself last season and Gehrig checked in with 37. Bill Dickey contributed 29 just to help matters along, and Selkirk, in 78 games, many as a pinch hitter, registered 18.

• • • •

At other points in the circuit, home run hitters have sprouted to temper the loss of Ruth. Hank Greenberg bashed no less than 40 for the Tigers and Wally Moses collected 25 for the Athletics. So did Bob Johnson. Harland Clift hit for the circuit on 29 occasions for the St. Louis Browns, and Julius Solters connected 20 times for Cleveland. The Indians' Hal Trosky hit no less than 32 homers.

• • • •

That may be one of the reasons why the major leagues are in no frenzy to "take care" of Ruth at great expense. But there is a better and more easily discerned reason. Ruth is insisting on a big league managerial job. He has never given any indication that he could handle that kind of a job.

• • • •

The blunt facts are that Ruth, as a ball player, couldn't even manage himself. There were times when he was breaking training with great regularity and on one occasion he drew down a $5,000 fine from Judge Landis. The handling of a big league ball team requires a certain skill and tact and model example that Ruth has given no evidence of being able to provide.

• • • •

At that, he might have been graduated to a job as a big league manager had he taken the advice of his friends and accepted a minor league managerial berth. But the Babe insisted on a major job, or nothing. He wouldn't go to the minors and prove his managerial ability. He wanted a big league job right off the bat.

In every other industry, unless a chap marries the boss' daughter, the employes don't jump into those key positions until they've proved their ability somewhere down the line. Ruth, conceivably, might have proved a successful manager in the minors. Of his baseball acumen there never was any doubt. And a reform in his personal behavior might have contrived to stamp the Babe as a managerial success.

Paradisical Places Over Dull Course

Corinto Is Third in Role of Favorite; Winner Clocked in 1:38.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 25. After finishing close up in two sprint efforts, Dewitt Page's Go Home today broke through with his initial success of the year when he won the Gulf Stream Purse, decided over the mile distance. The gelding, under a feathery 95 pounds, breezed past the wire four lengths to the good to return $7 for $2. I. J. Collins' Paradisical was second, a half length better than Mrs. Emil Denemark's confidently backed Corinto.

The time for the eight furlongs was 1:38. This was fair enough, considering that an early morning shower had slightly dulled the strip and the usual strong sun was only out in spots.

Corinto, winner of the Fort Dallas Handicap a week ago Saturday, began as if capable of repeating that impressive score. Eddie Arcaro took the Chicago-owned 6-year-old into a daylight advantage in the first furlong. Apprentice Sam Williams bided his time in second place with Go Home, whose campaigning had been confined to shorter events. However, Go Home left no doubt as to his ability to negotiate the longer distance.

When asked to move after Corinto around the bend, the son of Grandace responded with a steady charge that found him overtaking the pacemaker straightening out for home. He then galloped far in the clear. Paradisical also wore down the favorite in the hard drive for the place position. Bootless, Columbiana, and No Sir were soundly beaten.

Eddie Arcaro gave his followers a flying start as today's program opened with a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-old platers. The husky veteran was astride Ebony Boy, a 4 to 1 shot. He sent the black colt into quick command, alloed him to open up a comfortable lead while disposing of the favored Rich Cream, and reported three lengths on top. Didutellus overtook the tired Rich Cream for the place, the latter being beaten another three lengths.

Time Me, which had an unsuccessful fling at the turf course in her most recent outing, returned to the regular racing strip and won the second event of 1 mile, paying the lucrative odds of $18.70 for $2. The filly was outrun in the early stages, then Johnny Longden shot her through on the rail to gain the lead turning for home. She held on in a drive to beat the slow-starting Monument by three-quarters of a length. Jack Patches also came from well back to finish a well beaten third.

Those who played Time Signal on a hunch, following the victory of Time Me in the previous event, cashed at the rate $9.40 for $2 in the third. Ralph Eccard made no mistakes aboard the High Time colt, which was favorite. The Maryland boy broke him on top and kept him there for the full 6 furlongs, scoring easily with two lengths to spare over Trickwick, which forced the pace virtually from the start. My Kin came from far out of it to be third, five additional lengths away.

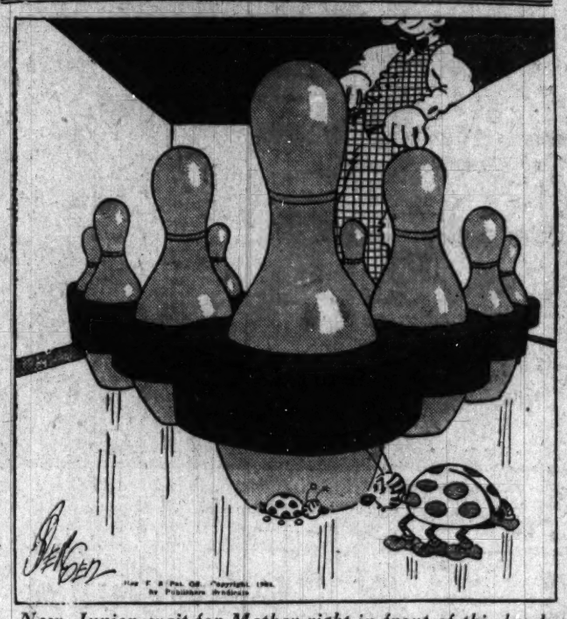
Time Out! BY CHET SMITH



Now, Junior, wait for Mother right in front of this headpin—you're perfectly safe—it's ladies' night!

Turn to the page opposite editorial and read Westbrook Pegler, who writes as he pleases.

Everett, Brown, Old Enemies; Tangle in Gym—Whatta Scrap!

Flames of Old Feud Flare Anew During Workouts at Huron's; Buck Confident of Taking Pastor.

Embers of an old but not dormant feud burst into flame yesterday when Buck Everett tangled with Natie Brown in a 3-round workout at the Huron gym.

Training for a 10-round bout with Bob Pastor Monday night at the Arena, Everett willingly mixed it with the heavier but equally belligerent Brown, and the ensuing battle may have been better than the one the fans will witness Monday. The Indiana steelworker holds a couple of decisions over Brown, verdicts that left a bad taste in Natie's mouth, and these probably were responsible for yesterday's outburst.

But there never has been any good will wasted between the two. Brown is a washed-up preliminary boy in Buck's book, and Natie doesn't have that much respect for Everett. Really, you should see 'em in action!

Rapidly rounding into fighting form, as he satisfactorily demonstrated against Heroff Brown, Everett is confident of taking Pastor's measure come Monday. The New Yorker's style is right down his alley, he contends, and he goes to the records to prove his superiority.

Pastor dropped a decision to Steve Dudas and was held to a draw by Al Delaney, while Buck has won decisions from both boys. The New Yorker, according to Jimmy Ewing, Buck's manager, is strictly a cutie—although he admits he packs a slightly annoying wallop in his right hand, and cuties don't last long with Everett.

Pastor is another transient on fistiana's comeback trail, after being sidetracked, temporarily, by his defeat at Nathan Mann's ponderous paws some time back. Since then, however, he has been brought along slowly and is beginning to win.

EBONY BOY outbroke the field, drew out at once and steadied while saving ground, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but then was taken in hand in the final furlong to win with speed in reserve. DIDUTELLUS gradually improved his position on the outside and closed with good courage. RICH CREAM, a forward contender all the way, faltered when it came to a drive, yet held the others safe. NEVER CEASE made up ground following a slow beginning. BOJANGLES quit.

TIME ME, going well up under light restraint in the opening six furlongs, slipped through on the inside at the stretch turn, drew out rapidly and held MONUMENT safe in the final drive. MONUMENT, slow to get going, gradually bettered his position on the extreme outside, made a game effort when put to a drive, but could not overtake the winner. JACK PATCHES, away tardily, gained steadily while saving ground in the final three furlongs and wore WHOOPER down in the last 50 yards. WHOOPER displayed good speed, but began to falter after going six furlongs. DARK SUN showed early foot. SCUDDER, quickest to begin, was under a drive after going a half mile and stopped badly.

I was amazed by Terry's mantilla flutterings. Bill should know by this time the difference between waving a red rag at a bull—and doing the same thing to a whole herd of "sacred cows." And that's exactly what the baseball writers are.

• • • •

I mean Terry may have been feuding with one or several of the writers, but that piece in the Post reads like an open invitation for the whole herd to trample him down. Maybe Bill doesn't care. Perhaps he already is so financially secure that he can brave the wrath of the Baseball Writers of America. I hope he is. Because I fear that magazine article may wash him up—as far as any permanence in baseball is concerned. Bill is just starting a new five-year contract as manager with the Giants. But his cape fluttering raises serious doubts in my mind if he ever will finish that contract.

• • • •

I gave that article only one reading, just as virtually all other fans will do. My impression was that Terry questioned the veracity, intelligence and knowledge of baseball writers in general. I believe that was a grave mistake. If Bill had singled out the writers with whom he was feuding and taken them to task, the situation might be different. If he had emphasized that the men who were "riding" him were exceptions to the profession as a whole, I would not be writing this. But Bill's whole blurb seems to attack the general body of men who chronicle the game.

• • • •

I think Terry was very wrong in doing this. Because I have come to regard baseball writers as specialists. Most of them know their business, and don't let Terry or anyone else kid you about them. Moreover, I am convinced that they are truthful and accurate journalists.

• • • •

In Terry's feuds with various baseball writers or cliques of writers, I always defended him. Because he was swell to me, personally. And because I like fellows with a flair for independence. But I'm sure Memphis Bill went too far this time, when he apparently strives to justify his stormy relations with the press by inferring that baseball writers, in general, are just a band of nitwits. Merely because he couldn't get along with individuals or cliques.

• • • •

For example, Willyum gives these sidelights on his holdout and $500 raise with the Giants in 1926: (1) "I was not deeply impressed with a craft that could violate a public trust by misinforming millions of baseball fans, intentionally or otherwise, for the sole purpose of enhancing the ball club's position in a salary discussion." And (2) "I was deeply impressed by the fact that the same gamewatchers and player analysts who had ash-canned me the year before were now obliged to herald me as the natural successor to the great George Kelly. It didn't make sense, and it was reduced to nonsense as the years piled up."

• • • •

That's the way Terry's tirade against baseball writers really starts going to town. And Bill emphasizes that at that time, mind you, I had no feeling against any individual, etc." In other words he harbored a robust disrespect for baseball writers when he took over the Giants first-basing job 12 years ago. It was a very frank but, I believe, unfortunate admission. Memphis Bill indicates that he became a Giant regular with a chip on his shoulder, as far as the writers were concerned.

• • • •

Was it any wonder then, that after he succeeded the late John McGraw as manager in June, 1932, he had difficulties with the press? Terry lists many of these incidents, and shows how right he was and how wrong were the reporters.

• • • •

Maybe Terry knew what he was doing when he gave off this article. And maybe he doesn't care about the repercussions. But it seems most unfortunate. Because Terry, despite all his self-confidence, knows that the percentage is very much against his piloting the Giants to a pennant annually for the next five years. He knows also that the moment he falters, the wolf pack will be down upon him in dead earnest. He waved the scarlet mantilla. He jerked out the red cape and flaunted it before the press. And I'm sorry it happened. Because the whole thing strikes me as "a good guy gone wrong."

Rassle Card Is Complete

Kudo, Kilonis, Strack, Meehan on Program.

With the addition of two preliminary matches to the card yesterday, Promoter Joe Turner completed plans for tomorrow night's wrestling show, which will be staged for the benefit of the President's Birthday Ball fund.

Jesse James, a popular muscle massager hereabouts, will risk his newly won world light-heavyweight championship against Gino Martinelli in the feature event. This is something new to Washington mat fans, who are accustomed in viewing heavyweight bouts.

But Uncle Joe foresees new popularity for the pastime in the light-heavyweight division, which is distinguished from the unlimited class by a rule requiring contestants to make 185 pounds or else—or else they don't. There is at least one case on record of two boys having complied with the rule, one being James and the other Steve Passas, who formerly possessed the championship.

Supporting bouts added yesterday are Qiman Kuda, alleged jiu jitsu expert, vs. Mike Kilonis, and Pete Meehan vs. Charlie Strack, of Olympic fame. Both are limited to 30 minutes.

Other supporting bouts, also limited to a half-hour, find Juan Olaguival meeting Tommy Rae and Same Singh pitted against Sheriff Tom Hanley.

Gomez Heads Holdout List

crop soon may be exceeded, judged by the rapidity with which the athletes are making their dissatisfaction a matter of public record. Even the Giants, famous for being one big, happy family, have uncovered two holdouts, Outfielder Hank Leiber and Catcher Harry (The Horse) Danning. Leiber was a casualty most of 1937.

All told, an Associated Press checkup today shows 31 avowed holdouts in the two major leagues, with a number of precincts still to be heard from. The "hush-hush" attitude of most clubs on salary subjects makes it difficult to determine the real extent of dissatisfaction. The Chicago White Sox, with seven known holdouts, lead the list.

Annually the names of Paul Waner, of the Pirates; Dizzy Dean, of the Cardinals; Zeke Bonura, of the White Sox, and Joe Stripp, former Dodger now on the Cardinal roster, appear among the holdouts. This year is no exception.

Fox," during the winter of 1900-01, induced 40 National League stars to "jump" to the American League.

It was open warfare between the two big leagues. At Boston, near the end of the 1902 season, Griffith turned his powers of oratory on six Pittsburgh players—Pitchers Jack Chesbro and Jess Tannehill, Catcher Jack O'Connor, Outfielder Lefty Davis, Second Baseman Jimmy Williams and Third Baseman Wid Conroy. They would "jump" to the American League if their salaries were increased.

Chesbro demanded a salary of $6,000. Tannehill, Conroy and O'Connor were willing to jump for $4,500. Davis and Williams set their figures at $4,000. To clinch the deal, Griffith promised each a $1,000 bonus for jumping.

The six players agreed to meet Griffith the following week at the Monongahela Hotel, Pittsburgh, to sign contracts. Griffith, triumphant, was ready to telegraph League President Johnson the excellent news, when he suddenly bethought himself. Here was his own chance to move into New York. He had long yearned to manage a New York club. His telegram to President Johnson eventually read:

"Six Pirate players will jump to American League, only on the condition that I am appointed manager of the New York team."

TOMORROW: With McGraw piloting the Giants in New York, Griffith moves to continue their feud, completing his plans to organize and manage a New York ball club in the American League.

Bob Tow, Pride of Alexandria, Signs for Bout in Hippodrome

Victor Over Eddie Hogan Points for Fight With Louis.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bob Tow, Alexandria heavyweight currently plying his trade in New York, yesterday signed to meet Red Burman February 2, at the Hippodrome Arena in that city. It will be a 10-round argument.

Home for a brief visit, Tow was informed of the match during a telephonic conversation with Joe Gould, who is handling his business affairs. Scheduling of the bout abruptly curtails the big fellow's sojourn here, for he will return to New York today with Harry Raskin, his trainer.

A protege of Jack Dempsey, Burman will have the former champion in his corner for the scrap, while Tow will be seconded by Jim Braddock. The husky bus driver worked with Braddock briefly while the latter was getting ready for his victorious engagement with Tommy Farr.

Tow's star has been rising steadily in the fistic firmament since he invaded New York, and his decisive 8-round decision over hard-hitting Eddie Hogan last week only served to bolster his position. He had Hogan in trouble midway in the fight and outfought him all the way. And judging from his appearance in the gym he looks ready for any of the bigger names.

"I sure would like to get a crack at Louis," he said yesterday. "But I'll take any of them—anybody Gould can sign."

He may get that Louis bout sooner than he expects, for only last week John Roxborough indicated that he thinks highly of Tow as a prospective opponent. Meanwhile, Bob is biding his time, taking what they give him and making the most of it.

"He doesn't look good in the gym," said Raskin as his man punched the bag, skipped the rope and shadow-boxed during a light workout. "But you should see him in the ring. This boy can punch, he's got plenty of the old moxey, and he's got a lot more confidence in himself.

"I don't say he's perfect, but listen, don't the champion make mistakes. He still does lots of things wrong, but we're gradually correcting his faults and he's learning something every day. He looked great against Hogan, and that Hogan's a tough baby. But Tow looked good because he followed instructions from the corner.

"He had that Hogan ready to go in the fifth, but was told to go easy. We didn't want him to explode and possibly lose his head and tire. Remember, Hogan don't go with just one punch, he recovers quickly. Make any mistakes with him and you're liable to be a dead duck. But Tow fought him perfectly and coasted in."

Jimmy Erwin Fails To Protest Fight

Viewing the matter more soberly, Jimmy Erwin yesterday decided to file no protest with the District Boxing Commission concerning Referee Eddie LaFond's action in halting a fight involving his fighter, Battling Burroughs. At the Arena Monday night Erwin said he would protest after LaFond waved Burroughs to his corner and awarded a technical knockout to Werther Arcelli. Burroughs bled profusely from a cut high on his scalp at the time.

"I have only the highest regard and admiration for Eddie LaFond, and have nothing against him for stopping the fight . . . for I think he was under the impression that my man was injured more seriously than he actually was. I feel sure he did what he thought best, but it was very unfortunate for my fighter."

Lusby, Quantrille Tie For Cage Scoring Lead

Eastern High Pair Paces Individual Scorers With 46 Points; Lincoln Park Five Is Leading Team Point-Getter.

By Jack Munhall.

Emerging the worse for wear but triumphant after a 2-hour session with adding machines and other mechanical devices which compensated for the arithmetic that skipped us in grammar school, we find ample proof for the success of Eastern in the interhigh basketball race.

The Lincoln Park five has been by far the heaviest scoring combination in the series, amassing 179 points in five games, for an average of slightly less than 35 per game. Tech, with 104, also in 5 engagements, is second; Central, with 97, in four contests, is third; Roosevelt, with 95, in four encounters, is fourth; Wilson, with 74, in three starts, is fifth and Western, the defending champion, with 62, in three games, is last.

In the individual scoring race, too, Eastern dominates. Little Lee Lusby, guard, and towering Clint Quantrille, center, the long and short of the team, are deadlocked for the lead, each having 46 points, or an average of slightly more than 9 per game. Third place is held by Russ Lombardy, scrappy Eastern guard, who has compiled 39. Central's center, John Fanning halts the Lincoln Parkers' monopoly by seizing fourth place with 29 but "Soup" Hancock, Eastern forward, takes the fifth spot, with 27, although held scoreless yesterday.

Completing the "big ten" are Archie Panago, Central guard, with 21; Ralph Matera, Eastern forward, with 20; Len Sokol, Central forward, and Bob Custer, Western forward, tied for eighth place with 17; Len Stanton, Western center, and Eli Blank, Tech forward, tied for the ninth spot with 16, and Malcolm MacDonald, Wilson forward; Merrill Heddings, Tech forward, and Leroy Curtis, same team, same position, tied for tenth, with 14.

Boston Giant To Show Here

240-Pound Amateur Is Beantown Pride.

A 240-pound package of heavyweight answering to the name of Frank Schludenski, is one of the problems Washington's golden gloves team will have to contend with February 4, when it faces a Boston team at Catholic University. Proceeds derived from the bouts will help swell the President's Birthday Ball fund.

Schlundenski, one of the biggest men in either amateur or professional ring today, won the Massachusetts State crown by knocking out Pete Santoro with one punch in the first round. He is reported to be one of the most promising rookies discovered in Beantown since John L. Sullivan.

The big fellow's opponent has not yet been named, inasmuch as Jim Brady, local champion, is not certain he will be able to appear. A student at Georgetown University, Brady is battling midterm exams at this time, but neglecting his training. In the event that he doesn't fight it will be up to Jim Keady, a young slugger under Sid Fishel's management, to uphold the District's honor. Keady is not only willing to supplant Brady but eager to get the assignment.

Another promising bout scheduled on the card involves Buster Miller, sensational Washington featherweight, and George Salamone. Miller lost to the Bostonian in the All-American tournament finals last month and is anxious to avenge that defeat.

Rick Accepts Cut Of $1,000 for 1938

Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 25.—Rick Ferrell, catcher for the Wahsington Nationals, said today he had accepted a $1,000 cut in pay for this season as compared with 1937. Ferrell, who lost six weeks of pay on account of injuries last year, said he would be ready to begin spring training with the team February 28.

Police Pistol Team In Action Tonight

The Park Police Pistol Team will be host to four of the city's best range teams tonight when it engages the Metropolitan, White House and Lorton Police Teams, and the Washington Pistol Club.

All clubs are first teams and the match will be held at the Park Police range, at Fifteenth and C streets southwest, at 8 p. m.

'Doc' Hall Scores Twin Victory in Billards Play

Displaying championship form, "Doc" Hall, one of the city's ranking cue artists, scored a twin victory last night in the three-cushioned billiards tournament, disposing of George Lamborn, 35—28, and "War Horse Charley" Goodacre, 35—19. The matches were played at Lewis & Krauss' parlors.

Hall came from behind to outpoint Lamborn, tying him at 28-all in the twenty-eighth inning, and running out the match from that point, 2—2—2—1. He found Goodacre easier, however, and took the match in 62 innings. Hall, whose best run was five, is now tied with Gene Ruark and Gene Flynn for top ranking in the tournament.

PWA Quintet Faces Merrick Boys Tonight

Public Works Administration, new entry into the Southeast Community Center Basketball League, faces its first opposition tonight when it engages the Merrick Boys Club five at Hine Junior High, at 7:15.

PWA is one of the strongest teams in the Government League and will be seeking second-half honors in the S. E. loop. National Savings & Trust play National City Christian at 8:15 p. m., and Miller Furniture meets Southeast Merchants an hour later.

Bill Robertson, grabbed the lead at 17-11 by intermission time. Robertson, in the course of this splurge, accounted for two baskets and as many charity tries.

Tech rallied to start the third period when Joe Parry and Charley Keagy scored, but Al Treganowan and Bill Love duplicated their efforts for the Riders, who then spurted to the van for keeps.

Louis West with 8, B. Robertson with 7 and Treganowan with 6, kicked in with most of Roosevelt's points. Eli Blank, Tech's "mighty mite," played his usual dependable game and also flicked in 8 counters. Sam Gendleman was next with 4, both made on difficult one-hand shots.

U.S. Steel Corp. Omits Dividend On Common

Quarter's Earnings Slump From Year Before; Regular Preferred Dividend.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Despite an unprecedentedly rapid decline in operations, the United States Steel Corporation kept its records in black ink for the fourth quarter of 1937, reporting a net income of $4,577,983 compared with $30,617,638 in the previous three months period and $20,650,780 the like quarter of 1936.

Directors declared a regular dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock but took no action on the common stock dividend.

The quarter report showed earnings of $1.27 a share on the preferred stock, compared with $2.79 a share on the common in the previous quarter and $1.65 a share on the common in the like 1936 period.

Net income for the full year of 1937, before allowing for Federal surtax on undistributed profits, amounted to $99,930,836, equal to $8.58 a share on the common stock, as against $50,525,684 or $2.90 a common share in 1936.

The failure of the directors to make another payment on the common stock was in line with widely-held expectations in Wall Street in light of the decline in steel operations in the last four months of 1937.

Last October, reflecting the improvement in operating conditions earlier in the year, the directors ordered a common stock dividend of $1 a share, the first on that stock since March, 1932, after clearing away previously the arrearages on the preferred stock.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman, in a statement commenting on the quarterly report, said the declining demand for steel products "continued during the last three months of the year, reaching the lowest level in December, in which month production was only 32.3 per cent of capacity.

"This serious interruption in activities of the mills created many difficult operating dislocations and intensified the falling off in earnings arising wholly from lesser volume," he said. Finished product output for the fourth quarter averaged 41.3 per cent of total capacity, compared with 73.6 per cent in the previous quarter and 85.5 per cent during the first six months of the year.

"For the entire year 1937 the average was 71.4 per cent, or better than any year since 1929, with an average of 89.2 per cent."

Otis & Co. Received Reward for Contacts

By the Associated Press.

W. R. Burwell, of Cleveland, former president of Continental Shares, Inc., testified at a securities commission hearing yesterday that Otis & Co., Cleveland and New York banking firm, received 3,300 "founders shares" partly in consideration of its "contacts."

Burwell testified on Monday that Continental Shares, an investment company, now in receivership, paid dividends of $325,000 on 10,000 "founders' shares" which cost their owners $1 each. The hearing is in connection with the commission's study of investment companies.

Cotton Steady; March at 8.48

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Cotton moved aimlessly today in quiet trading. May sold off from 8.60 to 8.55 and closed at 8.56, with final prices 1 point net higher to 4 lower.

The market opened unchanged to 3 points higher but there was enough hedge selling and scattered liquidation to check advances after prices had rallied a few points further immediately after the opening. When Liverpool support let up prices sagged about 4 to 7 points. There was a little more hedging toward the close in addition to March liquidation.

Quiet conditions were still reported in the cotton goods and spot cotton markets. Exports today 10,116 making a total of $3,866,339 for the season thus far. Port receipts 22,357; United States port stocks 3,244,198.

Treasury Offering Brings Higher Prices

Secretary Morgenthau announced last night that slightly higher prices were paid for the Treasury's weekly offering of $50,000,000 of 91-day Treasury bills.

The average price was 99.974, compared with 99.972 last week. Prices were equivalent to borrowing money at .103 per cent, compared with .111 per cent a week ago.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended January 22 totaled 36,204. For the same week of last year the total was 45,981. During the week ended January 15 the total was 35,971.

Wheat Prices Advance With Dust Storms

But Increased Offerings Leave Closings Near Previous Levels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 25—Reports of Kansas and Nebraska dust storms so thick that motorists and railroaders kept headlights burning did much today to make wheat prices average higher.

There were estimates also that export purchases of North American wheat had enlarged, totaling 400,000 bushels, and that Portugal was in the market as a potential buyer of 2,500,000 bushels of wheat.

Increased offerings, however, developed on fractional upturns of wheat values, and for the most part the market hovered at around yesterday's closing figures.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¼ cent higher than yesterday's finish, May 96@96⅛, July 91@91¼; corn also unchanged to ¼ up, May 60⅞, July 61⅛@61¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye unchanged to ⅛ advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 7 cents bulge.

The Market

Stocks Continue to Lose Ground in Slack Trading; U. S. Bonds Yield.

New York, Jan. 25.—Stocks, United States and other bonds and foreign exchanges were uneasily lower, but most commodity futures markets improved. Dullness was the rule throughout the financial trading. Closing prices showed losses of fractions to 3 points in the majority of stocks, but the average decline was moderate. May wheat rose an eighth of a cent to 96⅛ cents a bushel.

On top of its other difficulties the stock market was given a new anxiety by the SEC, and this proved to be another day of violent agitation in French exchange. Francs dropped sharply in the forenoon, losing 9 points and coming within half a point of the record low quotation reached in 1926. Support from the stabilization funds rallied the currency, but the episode was a reminder of the fact that the rest of the world as well as this country has its difficulties.

Narrow Price Range.

In stocks the price range again was narrow and the sales volume was small. In the first four hours the turnover was 400,000 shares, indicating another half million share session. Some of the volatile stocks were easily dislodged on a few sales. Among them were Manville, Morris, Union Pacific, Douglas, Boeing, Allis Chalmers, Steel, Bethlehem, Case, Smelters, Western Union, Westinghouse, National Steel and a few preferreds.

As groups the steel, metal, airplane and agricultural ranged 1 to 2 points lower. Fractions were clipped from the utilities, rails, foods, rubbers, oils and chemicals. Rensselaer & Saratoga Railroad, an inactive issue at the odd-lot post, yielded nearly half-a-dozen points on sales involving 40 shares. It sold at the lowest price on record.

Fiddling.

While the Securities and Exchange Commission fiddles with short selling operations in an attempt to fasten the tag of responsibility for the business depression upon the New York Stock Exchange, while Mr. Jackson, of the Department of Justice, cracks on more sail in his trust-busting cruise, and while the TVA wraps another coil around the luckless utilities which it is crushing as an aid to digestion, actual business continues to drag. Evidence obtained from the heads of leading corporations confirms the indications of the business statistics. It is now becoming the rule for business men to show resignation over the outlook for the first half of this year and to look with optimism toward the second half.

The traditional cheerfulness of the American business man, under fire on in peace times, is coming to his aid. Whether the hopefulness will be fulfilled or will have to be deferred longer with sickness of heart depends entirely upon Washington. Congress can do much and the President can do even more. So far neither is acting as though helpful measures will be taken for a while. Perhaps it will be necessary for the unemployment rolls to mount higher before the situation is fully appreciated among the economic managers and social reformers.

Dividend Omissions.

A few more corporation boards met today and failed to vote dividends on common stocks which received payments last year. The usual interest was taken in the quarterly meeting of the United States Steel Corporation held this afternoon and the market expected no dividend on the common, although $1 a share was voted last autumn, after a drought of several years. Dividend suspensions quite probably will be frequent until business profits again rise, for the ordinary hazards of business now are augmented by the undistributed profits tax. That caused more money to be paid out by corporations last year and the year before than otherwise would have been considered prudent. Now those corporations which are apprehensive lest their cash reserves run too low likely will be quick to conserve the position by suspending dividends.

Railroad traffic this month has been unsatisfactory, so that another series of reports similar to those now coming to hand for December must be anticipated. The first dozen roads to show net railway operating income last month report a fall of 58.8 per cent from the same month of the previous year. For the 12 months their net declined 19.1 per cent. Higher freight rates may be granted by the I. C. C. next month, effective probably in March, but while 10 or 15 per cent increase in the charges would add to revenue, that alone will not be sufficient to fortify the financial position of many roads. The railroads as well as other important industries must have a revival in general business in order to pull through.

Banking Position.

Changes which occurred here in the week ended January 19 dominated the statements of reporting member banks in 101 cities for that date, with the exception of Government securities portfolios. New York banks bought $52,000,000 more Federal securities, but the increase for the entire country was only $46,000,000. Chicago banks liquidated $13,000,000 and Richmond $6,000,000. The Richmond banks also sold $10,000,000 of Government guaranteed obligations, but New York banks absorbed all but $1,000,000 of the offerings. Other securities increased $13,000,000, most of the gain also being here. Commercial loans decreased $63,000,000 a little more than half the decrease occurring here. A drop of $30,000,000 in brokers' loans and small decreases in other forms of credit brought an aggregate fall of $106,000,000 in loans on the week. There were small changes in deposits, mostly at local banks. Reserves increased $47,000,000.

Short Selling.

The SEC's ruling on short selling failed to raise any dust in Wall Street. The old stock exchange rule requiring the designation of sales as short or long and permitting short sales only at or above the last preceding sale in no way deterred the short seller, although the effect sometimes was to make the short pay an eighth more for the privilege. The SEC now has tightened the rule to require a short sale only at a price above the preceding sale. That also will not stop short selling, but it may cost an eighth more than under the old rule. It is clear enough that the SEC is not altogether sincere in its procedure against bear traders. It is truckling to that large element in Washington and over the country which blames Wall Street for everything and especially the short seller.

More Coming.

"The Securities and Exchangee Commission has adopted a set of rules designed to prohibit short selling in a declining market." Those were the rules of the commission, obviously chosen to impress the public and, thanks to scare heads in the newspapers, they succeeded pretty well, for the public scarcely would go on to read the SEC's confession that the rule already in effect hadn't had much influence on short selling, although it differs only slightly from the new rule. On another side of the matter, the latest SEC move has more significance. It indicates a determination by Chairman Douglas to cut off the dog's tail, inch by inch. Wall Street expects a good deal more regulation and restriction calculated to extend the area of partial or complete paralysis in the securities markets and thereby to make sure that business recovery will not come at an unseemly rapid pace.

French Franc Slips To Near Low Point

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Sharp fall in the French franc today carried the currency almost back to the low point touched before the formation of the Chautemps government. At 3.26 cents, the franc was off more than .06 of a cent compared with a recent low around 3.23. It recovered later to 3.28½. In foreign exchange circles, the slide heightened interest in the course of the new government in meeting French economic and political problems. Traders held the immediate cause of the break was lack of support from the French control fund, which had stepped into the market last week and aided a rally.

N. Y. Exchange Bars Member Three Years

Although T.G. Thomas 2d, Had No Personal Knowledge of Irregularities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—The New York Stock Exchange today announced the suspension for three years of T. Gaillard Thomas 2d, a member of the firm of Thomas & Grimith, for violation of rules of the exchange.

The exchange charged that through his firm Thomas failed at various times to segregate the full amount of common stock of Electrol, Inc., and Eastern Footwear Corporation, which customers of the firm had paid for in full. It also charged that Thomas made improper use of the securities of the customer by pledging the securities for more than was fair and reasonable in view of the indebtedness of the customer and by delivering such securities on sales made by the firm for its own account.

Commissions Split.

Another specification was that Thomas, through his firm, paid to nonmembers a portion of its commissions for business procured by the firm.

Although Thomas had no personal knowledge of the use being made by the firm of cutsomers' securities, the exchange said, or the splitting of commissions with nonmembers, the announcement stated that inasmuch as a member is responsible under the constitution for acts of his partners, Thomas was found guilty.

Thomas represented the firm on the floor of the exchange. The exchange's records list Sanford Griffith and Bernard F. Toole as the other partners. Thomas became a member of the Stock Exchange in June, 1922. The present firm was formed in February, 1935.

Copper Outlook Held Favorable

The outlook is far more favorable for the copper industry in the United States than might appear at first glance, states the Brookmire Economic Service. The institution points out that producers' stocks are but 50 per cent of the burdensome levels of 1932; that production is being sharply curtailed for the present and that fabricators of copper are rapidly using up their own inventories so that they will apparently be in the market shortly to purchase more copper.

Both production and consumption of copper made new high records last year, continues the analysis, even exceeding 1929. However, the comparison with this earlier peak reveals wide differences between foreign and domestic copper developments. The reason for new high records last year was increased consumption of copper abroad, in part due to heavy armament programs, and did not reflect a similar degree of expansion of copper consumption in this country. In fact, states Brookmire, consumption last year was only 76 per cent of that in 1929.

C. G. W. Common Faces Extinction

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended yesterday reorganization of the Chicago Great Western Railroad Co. with a capitalization of about $62,000,000, more than $76,000,000 under its present capitalization. Examiner Homer H. Kirby proposed that common stockholders be wiped out in the reorganization.

Kirby's capitalization recommendation followed suggestions by the railroad's management and a bondholders protective committee. The examiner adopted some other recommendations from each plan and suggested some of his own. The railroad filed bankruptcy proceedings in February, 1935.

The examiner's plan calls for total fixed and contingent requirements of $1,702,135 annually. He estimated this would leave available for dividends about $1,000,000.

Forster Speaks On Investing

"Investing Money" was the subject of the address made yesterday before the Optimist Club of Washington by W. R. Forster, vice president of the Hamilton National Bank. Mr. Forster, a member of the speakers' unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, stressed the importance of the individual having full and complete information on all of his investments; that there should be no such thing as making an investment and putting it away in a safe deposit box and letting it be forgotten.

In discussing bank investments, he reviewed the changes which have taken place in the bank portfolios the past few years, explaining some of the factors which banks must take into consideration when making loans or buying securities. He reminded his audience that the funds which the bank has are those of its depositors and that the banker must always keep this in mind.

New Products Now 40% of DuPont Sales

Production and Distribution Give Employment to 18,000.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 25.—Twelve products, developed largely during the last ten years, accounted for about 40 per cent of the company's total sales volume in 1937, according to Lammot du Pont, president, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in an advance statement taken from his annual report to stockholders, which will be published early in February.

"The 12 lines," said Mr. du Pont, "accounted for about 40 per cent of the company's total 1937 sales volume; and their production and sale are now directly giving employment to approximately 18,000 workers, as compared with about 10,700 employes in 1928 in the same group of products. During the same period the company's investment in facilities for the manufacture of these products has increased from approximately $65,000,000 to approximately $174,000,000.

"The composite, or weighted average, reduction in sales prices for these 12 groups of products from 1928, or the year of introduction if later than 1928, up to and including 1937, has been approximately 40 per cent.

"In conformity with its policy, the company endeavors to increase consumption of its patented and other new products by aiming at a low profit per unit on a large volume of sales rather than a high margin on a small volume."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Certain safety plays are so unnatural from the point of view of habit that a declarer deserves no great criticism for failure to use them. We cannot always play hands on the supposition that we will get the worst possible break. But when such a break has actually been revealed, it is every declarer's duty to attempt to repair his fences.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 6 4 ♡ A ◇ A 7 6 3 ♣ J 10 9 5
♠ K 10 8 3 ♡ 9 5 2 ◇ J 9 2 ♣ K Q 4	North West East South	♠ — ♡ J 10 8 4 3 ◇ K Q 10 8 ♣ 7 6 3 2
	♠ A 9 7 5 2 ♡ K Q 7 6 ◇ 5 4 ♣ A 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The final contract was certainly a conservative one. South might, for instance, have bid four hearts instead of four spades, and the partnership might easily have reached a dangerous height.

When West opened the deuce of diamonds and the dummy appeared, South was glad that he had not gone further. But it did not even occur to him that he would have trouble holding his losses to three tricks. Winning with the diamond Ace, he then made a play which was certainly natural under the circumstances, namely the spade Queen. To his horror, East failed! Correctly refusing to kill two honors on one trick, declarer played low. West won and continued a diamond. East overtook, and played a third round. Declarer ruffed and led a heart to the Ace. Then, on the supposition that West's opening diamond lead had shown four, ruffed dummy's fourth diamond. He was promptly overruffed and, since he still had to lose a club trick, finally met defeat.

The spade break was, of course, unfortunate but by no means fatal. After ruffing the third diamond and leading to the heart Ace, there was no point in attempting to ruff the fourth diamond. Declarer should have returned to his hand with the club Ace, then should have cashed the King and Queen of hearts, discarding clubs from dummy. Then, he should have led his last heart. As the cards were actually divided, West would be unable to save himself. Certainly it would do him no good to ruff because then dummy could discard its last club. West, therefore, would throw off the club Queen but then would be put on lead with the club King and forced to lead away from his 10-8-3 of spades into the combined North-South ten-ace.

the partnership may reinvest the proceeds of the sale of any of said securities in bonds of the United States or of any state or municipality of the United States approved by Jay Cooke; upon the termination of the partnership or the withdrawal from the partnership by Jay Cooke, there shall be returned to him in repayment of his additional limited capital contribution such part or all of the securities originally contributed by him as aforesaid, as may then be on hand, and the proceeds of the sale of any securities constituting his additional limited capital contribution not then reinvested, and any new securities then on hand which have been purchased with the proceeds of such securities sold in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph; Bob Burns Says—

I believe one reason why they have so many divorces out here in Hollywood is because one of their past lives keeps comin' up in front of the other one. I heard two girls talkin' the other day on the movin' picture set and one of 'em told the other one that she was gonna get married to a fella and she says "Before I marry him, I'm gonna tell him the whole story of my past life." The other girl says "Well, when you do, you'd better sit on his lap and stroke his hair while you tell him." The prospective bride says "Well, why should I stroke his hair when I tell him about my past life?" and the other girl says "It'll keep his hair from standin' on end."

Britain Speeds Huge Defenses For Hongkong

Fearing Japanese Movements, She May Make It 2d 'Gibraltar of East.'

(Pictures on Page 14.)

By James A. Mills.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Hongkong, Jan. 25.—Fearful that Japan might attempt to extend her military activities in China toward this British colony, Hongkong is fortifying to such an extent that it soon may be, like Singapore, another "Gibraltar of the East."

Emergency crews of military and naval engineers, technicians and laborers are working 24 hours a day to complete a $40,000,000 program of harbor, land and air defenses.

The hills and islets on the fringe of the colony already are bristling with heavy guns, machine gun and antiaircraft emplacements.

There are hundreds of searchlights to spot aerial attackers and mythical raids and "blackouts" are staged periodically to train the populace. Any resident failing to put out all lights when ordered may be fined up to $1,000.

Grimly Beautiful.

With the thousands of homes in inky darkness and the far-flung batteries of searchlights fingering the sky, the colony presents a grimly beautiful spectacle. The only noise to be heard above the eclipsed city is the drone of "invading" and "defending" planes.

Hongkong fears that some day the thunder of bombardment may be added.

Observers say the countless machinegun nests could hold up an attacking land force for two weeks. The larger naval and land guns in the hills—said to include several 16 and 18-inch cannon of range greater than any ship-mounted gun—could hold back an attack by sea.

Even so, British authorities claim only sufficient precautions to keep an invading force at bay until help could arrive from Singapore or even Australia or India. Singapore is three days away by warship.

The chief military interest centers on the heavy-caliber guns being mounted on the "peak" above Hongkong and in the high hills just behind Kowloon. The guns are landed and set up only under cover of darkness and guards bar all approaches to the emplacements.

1,000 Mines Laid.

Reliable sources say more than 1,000 mines have been laid for the defense of the harbor and Tolo Bay, north of Kowloon Peninsula. An elaborate network of military roads is being thrown across the hills between Kowloon and Tolo Bay.

As fast as Hongkong's one cement factory can turn out material, concrete pillboxes and watch towers are being erected at stragetic points in the barren territory between Kowloon and Tolo Bay in the belief that any naval attack would start in the bay region.

Japan's wide-scale aerial operations in China convinced British authorities the colony's air defenses were far from adequate. They ordered expenditure of $350,000 for construction of bombproof shelters, gasproof cellars and decontamination chambers for civilians at numerous points in congested areas.

But to provide a minimum standard of safety from air attacks for Hongkong's 1,000,000 civil population it is estimated that $700,000 more must be spent for additional equipment against air raids and gas attacks. This would include gas masks for all.

More than 200 bombing, pursuit and scouting planes will be stationed here under the full quota ordered for the colony.

Before troops can be sent to reinforce the four battalions of British soldiers here now, new barracks must be built. Construction of new barracks on a $7,000,000 appropriation was started nearly a year ago. The first cantonment, 23 buildings, will be completed within a few weeks.

Russia Prepares.

London, Jan. 23 (AP).—The London Daily Mail today says Russia's Far Eastern coast facing Japan has been placed on a wartime footing with the construction of new air and naval bases.

The newspaper, in Hongkong dispatches, quotes a "prominent foreigner" who has just returned from a tour of Far Eastern Russia, as reporting over 100 submarines already are in commission at Vladivostok and more arriving each week by way of the Trans-Siberian railway to be assembled.

He says that an all-military town is being built on the coast, where 500 warplanes are stationed, and that complete black-outs and gas-mask drills are being held several times a week in principal Far Eastern cities.

Aguinaldo Supports U. S. Trade Concession

Manila, Jan. 25 (AP).—Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, who led an insurrection against the United States early this century, today indorsed President Roosevelt's suggestion of trade concessions to the Philippines for 14 years after independence.

The general said, however, the islands should have complete freedom in 1939 and 1940, instead of 1946.

Briton to Aid U. S. Labor.

London, Jan. 25 (AP).—Herbert Morrison, Labor member of Parliament and former minister of transport, announced today he had accepted an invitation to go to the United States to help the American Labor Party with problems of organization.

Guns of Foreign Warships Roar 'Happy Birthday' to Australia

By the Associated Press.

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 25.—Guns of United States cruisers and other foreign warships today thundered salutes in a prelude to the opening tomorrow of celebrations of Australia's 150th birthday.

The United States cruisers Louisville, Memphis, Trenton and Milwaukee steamed between the great sandstone Sydney heads with warships of France, Italy and the Netherlands. Eighteen royal air force planes escorted them.

Australia will commemorate her 150 years as a white settlement with celebrations extending over three months.

Gay crowds swirled in the streets tonight. Public buildings were floodlit and the Sydney harbor bridge was illuminated.

A water and shore pageant tomorrow will depict the landing on January 26, 1788, of Capt. Arthur Phillip with soldiers and 800 convict settlers.

The American revolution had prevented the deportation of the convicts—many of whom were political offenders or children sentenced for slight offenses—across the Atlantic and they were sent instead to colonize the land "down under."

Loyalists Yield AsFrancoHurls Army at Teruel

Preparations Made to Quit City; 150 More Slain in Barcelona Raid.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France (on the Spanish Frontier), Jan. 25.—Terrific fighting raged around the shattered city of Teruel tonight, with the loyalists forced back slowly by an insurgent counter-offensive.

The loyalists, preparing to evacuate the Aragonese city they seized December 21 in the costliest fighting of the war, said, however, that Gen. Franco's eagerness to recapture the city would prevent him from organizing another major offensive on any front for at least five months.

After intense artillery and aviation preparation, the nationalist infantry attacked in a half-circle extending around the Teruel suburbs on the north, west and south. One column attacked along the left flank from the Alhambra River, and another advanced on the right flank south of the city, which lies in a saucer-shaped plateau below sharp mountain peaks.

150 Killed in Barcelona.

Barcelona, Spain, Jan. 25 (AP).—Insurgent bombers in two heavy raids on Barcelona were estimated tonight to have killed about 150 persons and wounded nearly twice as many.

In an early morning attack, 40 bombs were dumped on the city within three minutes. Six struck within a city block, each killing from one to six sleeping persons. Five raiders came back in the afternoon and subjected suburbs to a heavy bombardment.

Insurgent raiders last week killed an estimated 100 persons and wounded more than 200 in bombing attacks on the city, important Catalan seaport city and present seat of the Spanish government.

Madrid Planes Kill Moors.

Gibraltar, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Spanish (Government) press agency reported there were "165 casualties" at Ceuta today when Spanish government planes bombed the Spanish Moroccan port. The agency said 500 Moors were waiting on a dock to board an insurgent ship for Spain when two government planes dropped 15 500-pound bombs.

Loyalists Bomb Valladolid.

Tragic Tenth Wedding Anniversary

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Today is the tenth wedding anniversary of William Gaston (left) and Rosamond Pinchot, society actress and niece of former Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who killed herself Monday. Gaston, her estranged husband, is shown after he arrived by plane from Colorado for funeral services today. They had two sons.

Big Powers Agree Not to Force Small Nations Into Sanctions

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Jan. 25.—An unofficial understanding, giving League of Nations members freedom from applying sanctions, emerged tonight on the eve of the League council's one hundredth session as a possible compromise between Great Britain annd France and the smaller, anti-sanction nations.

Under such a compromise, the "punitive" article 16—or sanctions article—would remain in the League Covenant. League circles said the Anglo-French scheme was to inform the antisanction nations in private talks they had freedom to act as they pleased provided the text of the article was untouched.

Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign relations, was reported prepared to follow such a lead.

(In Paris, where British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden conferred with French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and Premier Camille Chautemps, it was stated France and Britain agreed to fight attempts to weaken the League pact.)

Permanent officials predicted the League session would be short, with little done in the open meeting but much accomplished in secret sessions and Geneva hotels.

Four main questions on the League's agenda included:

China's appeal against Japan in their undeclared war.

An urgent petition by the General Council of the Jewish Congress that the League Council deal with the question of rights of Rumanian Jews under the minorities treaty.

Reports of economic and financial committees.

The Turkish government's reservation and observations on the preparation for the first elections of the sanjak (state) of Alexandretta under a settlement between France and Turkey. Alexandretta in northwestern Syria was granted autonomy last year, and a committee named by the League began work to organize and control elections.

It was expected China's appeal against Japan would be limited to a speech by Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, chief of the Chinese delegation.

Fighting Rages Near Shanghai With Cold Steel

Hills Around Wuhu Strewn With Dead; Canton Area Target of Planes.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Jan. 26.—Hand to hand fighting with swords and bayonets raged today on two fronts north of Shanghai, with thousands of Japanese and Chinese regular troops engaged.

Heaviest fighting was reported in the vicinity of Wuhu and Hohsien, in Anhwei Province, where the first pitched battle since the fall of Shanghai was carried on through the night, with enormous casualties on both sides after three days of deadlock.

Hills Strewn With Dead.

Chinese military planes and Japanese gunboats fought along the Yangtze River, and the Japanese command in Shanghai dispatched reinforcements.

The hills around Wuhu, which changed hands several times during the battle, were strewn with dead.

Farther north, on the Tsining front, Japanese strugged to break through strong Chinese defense works for a drive southward to cut the important Lunghai Railroad.

Along the southern coast, Japan continued her aerial warfare against the Canton area in an effort to slice China's "life line" of communications to the interior.

Airdrome Attacked.

Thirty Japanese airplanes late yesterday bombed railroads in the Canton area and attempted to destroy the Tienho Airdrome, near the American Seventh-Day Adventist Hospital.

The attack on the airdrome was against a new shipment of British airplanes for the Chinese forces. Chinese antiaircraft guns drove off the enemy planes after 20 bombs had been dropped with slight damage.

Chinese reports said a Japanese plane machine-gunned a passenger train on the Canton-Samshui Line, killing four persons and wounding several.

It also was reported a Japanese destroyer entered the mouth of the Pearl River, below Canton, and shelled the village of Paoan, killing several natives.

In South China, a heavy Japanese aerial and naval bombardment of Namtau, north of Deep Bay and about a mile from the border of the British-leased territory, was reported yesterday.

U. S. Japanese Aid Army.

Los Angeles, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Japanese Patriotic Association of Southern California announced today it would send $10,000 to buy a plane for the Japanese army.
